ENEMY SUFFERS CRUSHING DEFEAT

Fleeing Jap Fleet Being Pounded

WIDE AREA OF OCCUPIED TERRITORY HIT

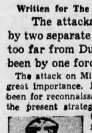
Huge British Bombers Smash At Ruhr Valley Plants

Separate Jap Forces Make Dutch Harbor, Midway Raids

By REAR ADMIRAL YATES STIRLING, JR.
U.S.N., Retired.
Written for The British United Press and The Edmonton Bulletin

The attacks on Dutch Harbor and Midway Island were by two separate forces. They were only a day apart and it is too far from Dutch Harbor to Midway Island for it to have been by one force.

The attack on Midway may be of great importance. Both could have been for reconnaissance, to discover the present strategical position of the United States fleet, or they could be initial thrusts to be followed up, if conditions warrant, by an all-out attack on Alaska, Hawaii or the Pacific coast.



Stirling

It would appear poor strategy to waste time at Midway if the final and supreme attack is destined to be in Hawaii, 1,100 miles away. The attack makes sense only if the Japanese are attempting to draw off the fleet guarding Hawaii in order to attack with air forces in the absence of most of the Allied war vessels.

The Japanese also may hope to intercept an inferior force of warships and airplanes sent from Hawaii to reinforce Midway.

It would seem unlikely that Japanese naval strategy would be led so far afield at this time as to attack the Panama Canal.

Refund Meet To Commence Here Monday

Conference of the Alberta Debt Refunding Committee to discuss the proposed refunding of $131,000,000 of Alberta debentures now in the hands of the public will open at 2 p.m. Monday at the legislative buildings, it was reported Saturday by Hon. Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer and chairman of the committee.

It is expected that representatives of the bondholders will arrive in Edmonton over the week-end to attend the meeting, which will likely last for several days.

Government representatives on the committee are Mr. Low, chairman; Hon. Ernest C. Manning, provincial secretary and minister of trade and industry; Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, minister of health and relief; and J. F. Percival, deputy provincial treasurer.

BONDHOLDERS' SPOKESMEN

Those on the committee representing the bondholders are Courtland Elliott, Toronto economist and a member of A. E. Ames company; H. W. Tatlock, Newark, N.J., official of the Prudential Life Assurance Company and H. A. Howard, Calgary, vice-president of the Trust and Guarantee Co. Ltd., who represents the Southern Alberta Bondholders' Protective Association.

It is reported that in addition to these representatives, bondholders have appointed a spokesman for holders of Alberta bonds who are resident in the British Isles. Name of this spokesman has not been announced.

Of the $131,000,000 under review for refunding, $22,000,000 represents debentures which the government has defaulted.

Interpreting War News

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Despite the formidable Japanese force engaging in the operations against Midway Island, it still is difficult to wave a logical pattern of enemy purpose in the north-central Pacific that does not smack more of information-seeking than anything else.

That was the first official interpretation given the Dutch Harbor phase and presumably represented the opinion of Admiral Chester Nimitz, the American officer primarily charged with the duty of protecting sea and flying skill with the foe in that vast and once peaceful sweep of sea. His Pacific fleet command makes him the man on the job.

Whatever the Japanese design in

Rostock Bombing Forces Evacuation Many Thousands

LONDON, June 6—(CP)—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Zurich today quoted the German newspaper Das Reich as stating the Rostock bombings last month, in which the R.C.A.F. participated, forced a large-scale evacuation into Pommerania and Mecklenburg provinces.

The Neue Zuercher Zeitung quoted eyewitnesses as saying 60,000 of Rostock's 121,000 inhabitants had been evacuated up to April 30.

Escaped Balloons Cause Vancouver Power Disruption

VANCOUVER, June 6.—(CP)—Two Vancouver radio stations were forced off the air and other electric power disruptions were caused today when the trailing cables of barrage balloons which broke loose from positions in Washington during the night and drifted northward became entangled with power lines near Vancouver.

Airman Missing

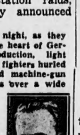
SASKATOON, June 6—(BUP)—R.C.A.F. headquarters announced that a student of No. 4 Service Flying Training School is missing after his plane crashed last night in the South Saskatchewan river near Hague.

By EDWARD W. BEATTIE

LONDON, June 6—(BUP)—Britain's great four-engined bomber planes, to a total of 300 or more, attacked the German Ruhr war industry centre during the night for the third time in five days of their new devastation raids, the air ministry announced today.

Throughout the night, as they struck again at the heart of Germany's war production, light bombers and night fighters hurled bombs and poured machine-gun bullets into targets over a wide area of German-occupied territory.

Planes based on the Mediterranean and the Middle East extended the offensive to a front of more than 800 miles by bombing Naples, Italy's third city, in waves and, by admission of the Italian command, starting fires.



Beattie

And as the night force winged homeward, with distant explosions still shaking the southeast English coast as the result of their bombings in the Boulogne area, hundreds of British day shift planes raced into the rising sun to resume the round the clock offensive which entered its second week today.

13 PLANES LOST

"Last night strong bomber forces attacked an objective in the industrial district of the Ruhr," the air ministry communique said of the night raid.

"Thirteen of our aircraft are missing."

This compared with 44 lost in the Cologne raid last Saturday night, the 1,000-plane spearing of the devastating attacks; 35 over Essen Monday out of 1,036; 14 over Essen Tuesday out of an estimated 300 and 10 over Bremen Wednesday out of an estimated 400.

Germany, admitting a British raid on "western Germany" last night—it has never explicitly announced a raid on Essen, probably the most heavily-defended city in Germany —said that 10 British planes had been shot down.

166 LOST IN WEEK

The air ministry, in putting the total at 13, brought the total British losses in one week to 166 out of a total of 3,000 or more long-range bombers engaged.

For the first time since the history-making offensive started, Germany failed to make a retaliation raid. Not one enemy plane was reported over the British Isles throughout the night.

Britons knew that Germany was being raided when radio Berlin went off the air at 12:40 a.m.

All day yesterday hundreds of planes, to a total of probably 1,000 or more, including Douglas Boston light bombers and swarms of Spitfire fighters attacked German submarine bases, power stations and airdromes in French and Belgian occupied territory.

Then through the night, buildings rocked along the southeast English coast as the night shift bombed a wide area of northern France, centring on the Boulogne area.

NEW WHIRLWINDS USED

The sunrise opening of the day attacks indicated another punishing day for the Germans in occupied territory.

The air ministry mentioned that Whirlwind Fighters had been in action yesterday, and then revealed for the first time that these planes now were equipped with four cannons.

U. S. War Production Only Starting To Roll

Donald Nelson Takes Drastic Action

This is the third of a series by Mr. Hutchison, who has been in Washington surveying the American war scene.—EDITOR.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON
Political Writer of The Vancouver Sun

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 6.—When Donald Nelson took charge of the largest production project in history he was confronted with a chart at once simple and alarming. One line on this chart moved up sharply, showing that the United States had voted $195 billions for the war, an almost fantastic sum. This was satisfactory. Below it was another line which showed how much money had been appropriated for actual production. This line, too, was moving up fast, showing that munitions contracts were being awarded at a dizzy rate. Far below that line Mr. Nelson saw a third and it frightened him.

The third line represented the actual production of munitions now. It sagged far below the other two lines and, worse, it was running almost level. Production was rising slowly and production now was the thing that mattered. Soldiers, Mr. Nelson reflected, could not fight today with weapons to be made next year or two years from now. So he took a desperate step. He cancelled all munitions projects which could not start producing at latest by July 1, 1943.

PRODUCTION MOVES UP

That decision altered the whole course of production in America, and thus will probably alter the whole course of the war. It means that money, men, materials are going into the third line on the chart, the line of actual output, and less of them are going into the line which represents contracts for new plants.

DONALD NELSON

Already the effects are showing. Production has suddenly started to move upward where it had been running on an almost level course. Now, for the first time, the United States is hitting its stride. The flood of weapons, which might have been delayed for months, has just begun.

The size of the flood is the United States' chief military secret. Mr. Nelson only says that he hopes to be producing at the rate of $60 billions a year at the end of this year. Next year he should turn out something over $80 billions worth of weapons, perhaps $90 billions. That would probably be well over twice the total Axis production and it does not include, of course, the production of the other democracies.

The Nelson policy of concentrating on present production at the expense of plant expansion a year hence is a continental policy. The understanding here is that Canada will do the same thing —no diversion of energy into projects that will not produce weapons by the summer of 1943. Behind this decision are certain hard and little-known facts.

STEEL VITAL

First, the facts of steel. The United States steel industry has completely under-estimated the needs of the war. It has not expanded to meet the present huge demands on its output Up to recently it has insisted that it could easily supply all the steel the munitions industries could use. Instead, North America is

Several Battleships, Carriers, Transports, Cruisers Are Damaged

By FRANK TREMAINE

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii, June 6.—(BUP)—A major Japanese fleet is withdrawing under relentless attack with battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers and transports damaged after a humiliating and possibly disastrous defeat near Midway island, United States Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

"As more reports come in it appears that the enemy's damage was very heavy indeed, involving several ships in each of the carrier, battleship and transport classes," he said.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz

The communique apparently said that several carriers, several battleships, several cruisers and several transports had been damaged, making a total of eight to 12.

At Honolulu a navy spokesman said today that Admiral Chester W. Nimitz' reference to "several" Japanese ships damaged in each class in the Midway naval battle referred to "more than one" vessel for each of four classifications.

Definite Invasion Attempt Is Seen

(The interpretation would indicate that between eight and 20 Japanese battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers and destroyers were damaged in the victory over the Japanese fleet off Midway.)

The disclosure that the major enemy fleet included transports made it evident that United States defence forces had repulsed a definite Japanese invasion attempt —on Midway or even a more vital objective.

One enemy aircraft carrier, first damaged by aerial bombs, was later struck by three submarine torpedoes, the commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet announced in one of the most dramatic communiques of the war.

Reciting the damage to the enemy fleet, he continued:

"This damage is far out of proportion to that which we received . . .

"While it is too early to claim a major Japanese disaster it may be conservatively stated that United States control remains firm in the Midway area.

"The enemy appears to be withdrawing but we are continuing the battle."

There was as yet no official indication of the destination or mission of the Japanese fleet which defending forces, working in perfect unison, repulsed.

There remained a possibility that both the Midway attack Thursday and the Dutch Harbor attack Wednesday were diversions to screen a major attack on Hawaii or even the Canadian-United States coast. If so, the scheme had failed.

Nimitz's communique implied plainly that the attack had been beaten off and probably definitely broken.

Nimitz said that in several instances enemy planes machine-gunned United States fliers who had bailed out of their craft by parachute or were adrift in rubber boats.

He did not mention Japanese plane casualties. But his first communique yesterday on the Midway attack had made it plain that the enemy suffered a frightful air force toll in its frustrated attack on Midway.

Observers here believe that the United Nations might now have an opportunity of seriously crippling Japanese naval strength, to the extent of marking a turning point in the Pacific war, in developments in the Midway zone.

WASHINGTON, June 6—(AP)—The sinking of three United Nations merchant vessels by enemy submarines in the Caribbean area was announced by the United States navy today.

Nazis Seek To Suppress Potential Fifth Column

By JOHN A. PARRIS

LONDON, June 6—(BUP)—The Germans, still executing innocent Czechs for the assassination of Reinhard Heydrich, today were trying to suppress a potential fifth column they fear will stab them in the back the moment an Allied invasion begins.

Occupation authorities ordered all Belgian commissioned and non-commissioned officers and reserve officers to register between June 8 and 13. Those failing to do so will be "severely punished," the German said.

Obviously this was an effort more firmly to control men who might organize and lead guerillas, fighting almost as efficiently behind and among the Germans as real armies. It was recalled that the Germans had previously taken Dutch officers as hostages in case of attempts against Germans.

Parris

In this connection, the German radio loudly denied "reports of the alleged deportation of 100,000 Netherlanders to White Russia.

30 MARTYRS SHOT

It was true, the radio said, that "some criminal Jews" have been sent to former Russian territory to work. The Germans frequently use "Jew" and "criminal" as synonyms for any one who does not approve their handiwork.

Thirty more martyrs were shot at Prague and Brunn yesterday, making a total of 207 killed in reprisal for the shooting of Heydrich, No. 2 man of the Gestapo. Among them were the secretary of the Prague Chamber of Commerce and his wife, a leading Prague banker, two university professors and a Catholic dean, reports reaching London said.

Radio Prague broadcast today that "special courts" in Prague and

New Airgraph Rates Are Set

OTTAWA, June 6.—(CP)—Reduction of airgraph rates to members of the armed forces overseas, extension of the service to include messages to civilians in the United Kingdom, and introduction of a new air letter for use in communication with the armed forces abroad was announced today by Postmaster General Mulock.

The changes are effective June 15. The present airgraph rate of 10 cents a message to soldiers, sailors and airmen in Britain or the Middle East is cut to six cents.

The airgraph messages sent to civilians will cost 15 cents each.

The new airletter will be a 10-cent service, and may be sent to members of the Canadian, British or Allied forces anywhere in the world.

Russ Paper Sees Start Of Second Front In Europe

KUIBYSHEV, Russia, June 6.—(AP)—The big-scale British attacks on the Ruhr and Rhineland this week mark the start of a huge scale British and United States offensive on Germany which will open an actual western front, the leading article in the Moscow News said today.

Importance Heavy Bombers Growing

WINNIPEG, June 6—(CP)—The heavy type of bomber plane will play a more and more important part in the war, Rt. Hon. Harold Balfour, British parliamentary undersecretary for air, said in an interview here.

A heavy bomber, he said, can do the work of five smaller aircraft, effecting a saving both of planes and men.

Capt. Balfour, who arrived by plane from Ottawa last night, said that air force is providing us with our second front, an integral and important part of our extended and enlarged war program."

Brunn had condemned 60 persons to death yesterday and Thursday and that they subsequently had been executed, but did not reveal the charges against them.

Their "crimes" were approving the death of Heydrich and in supporting those who shot him—still missing despite a $480,000 reward and diligent Gestapo work—not registering or having dealings with others who had not registered, and having arms.

The Gestapo still was looking for the patriots who tried to blow up the offices of the "French volunteers legion for fighting Bolshevism" in Rennes. Damage was considerable, the trans-ocean agency said, but none was hurt or killed, although the explosion was strong enough to blow the windows from houses in the neighborhood.

5,000 Acres Of Cologne Damaged

By NED RUSSEL

LONDON, June 6—(BUP)—Five thousand acres of Cologne were heavily damaged by the R. A. F.'s 1,000-plane raid last Saturday night, aerial photographs of the city revealed today.

An air ministry expert said that no part of the Ruhr industrial city escaped damage but that the famous Cologne cathedral was spared, the closest hit to it falling 160 yards away.

"A greater part of the old town of Cologne is finished, however," the expert said. "Three big areas west of the cathedral were devastated."

The destroyed regions included patches 880 by 290 yards in area, 490 by 250 yards, and 700 by 250 yards.

The vital Hindenburg bridge over which moved much of Cologne's heavy industrial traffic was hit at the entrance on its eastern bank, but the Hohenzollern bridge, likewise important to the flow of Nazi munitions and materials of war, apparently was not hit, the photographs revealed.

The Nippes railroad works were "badly wrecked." the air ministry said. An area 1,300 by 660 yards in the Ehrenfeld industrial workers' section was severely damaged, and the exhibition hall was partly damaged.

Five thousand acres would be an area of about eight square miles.

Drew Charges Hong Kong Report Not Based Upon Evidence Given At Probe

TORONTO, June 6.—(CP)—Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, named by Conservative House Leader Hanson at Ottawa as counsel at the Hong Kong inquiry, last night issued the following statement:

"I find it almost impossible to believe that the summary of the report which I have read in the press has any reference whatever to the evidence given before the inquiry which I attended. The actual facts brought out in evidence were so blood-curdling that the public have a right to know what did take place.

"One thing which I have learned from this inquiry is that there is nothing so contrary to the public interest as a secret inquiry into public business. There was never, at any time, any reason for this inquiry to be held in secret.

"CONCEAL BLUNDERING"

"It is clear now that secrecy has served no purpose except to hide from the public the evidence of inexcusable blundering, confusion and incompetence which marked every stage of the proceedings from the time that this force was decided upon until the time it left Canada.

"The government refused, to make full disclosure before the commencement of important communications regarding this matter and the minutes of the war committee relating to the authorization, organization and dispatch of this force were excluded upon the objection of government counsel.

"For this reason, evidence was not before the inquiry upon which any finding regarding the conduct of the government itself could properly be made. There was, however, very complete evidence upon which a finding should have been made regarding the handling of this matter by the military authorities.

"I will defer any further comment until I have had an opportunity to read the full report in detail and compare its findings with the actual facts disclosed at the inquiry."

Invasion Barges Moving To Baltic

LONDON, June 6.—(CP)—A Reuters dispatch quoting "reliable sources" in Stockholm said yesterday that flat-bottomed invasion boats, which the Germans massed in large numbers along the Netherlands, Belgian and French coasts in the summer and fall of 1940, are being moved in growing numbers through the Kiel canal into the Baltic sea.

(An invasion of Sweden by Germany, particularly if the United Nations make a move into Norway, had been rated by expert observers for weeks as one of the possibilities of Hitler's 1942 schedule. The Associated Press, in a symposium of expert observers' opinions, reported on April 15 that Hitler "seems to be preparing for an invasion of Sweden.")

City Airman In Attack On Ruhr

By ALAN RANDAL

LONDON, June 6.—(CP)—A Canadian squadron which in the last eight days has flown almost 100,000 miles against the enemy, returned to Germany's "sunnyy valley" of the Ruhr during the night, riding the vanguard of a strong R.A.F. bomber force.

The Canadian group was composed of upwards of 30 members of the squadron commanded by Wing Cmdr. John Fulton of Kamloops, B.C. The airmen dropped flares to guide squadrons attacking later, as well as incendiaries and high explosives.

As the returning fliers checked in to Flt. Lt. Dan McCann, Ottawa footballer who now is the squadron adjutant, they agreed the attack was a "hot one" and met more than the usual large defences.

Among Canadians in the foray were PO. A. H. Harris, Milner, B.C.; FO. John McCormack, Estevan, Sask.; Flt. Sgt. M. L. Swanson, Edmonton; Flt. Sgt. R. J. Hubbard, Truax, Sask.

He said he trudged over Belgium in soleless shoes, going without food and even sleeping in a cemetery one night when too closely pursued by

REVIEW ISSUED

100 R.A.F. Raids Made During May

By WILLIAM STEWART

LONDON, June 6.—(CP)—A devastating blow at Cologne and smashing attacks on enemy shipping to which the R.C.A.F. "Demon Squadron" lent its weight were Britain's outstanding achievements during a month of air operations curtailed by bad weather, an air ministry statistical review for May said today.

Altogether during the month, the ministry reported, the R.A.F. carried out a total of 100 attacks against 38 targets in Europe and the Middle East while the coastal command with the "Demons" led by Wing Cmdr. A. C. Atwood, D.F.C., sank or damaged 42 ships off the Norwegian, Netherlands, Belgian and French coasts.

In the Mediterranean five enemy vessels, including a destroyer, were sunk or damaged.

In all offensive and defensive operations, in the year to date the R.A.F. destroyed 283 enemy aircraft —96 in Europe and 187 in the Middle East—for the loss of 301. European losses were 194, those in the Middle East 107.

The month brought a reduction in the scale of attack on the Mediterranean island of Malta whose defences accounted for 114 enemy aircraft.

Against Germany and Nazi-occupied territory the bomber command was able to operate only nine days and 10 nights.

"The attack on Cologne the night of May 30-31 created history," the review said of the first "four-figure" bombing operation in the annals of aerial warfare.

U.S. Production War Materials Is Only Starting

short of steel in many categories it is so short of scrap iron that it may have to make it by a cheap process instead of gathering it up by mileage. At the moment there is no prospect of any large expansion in total steel production, though it is climbing gradually, he men who long ago demanded that the steel industry expand, are renewing their demand' but this cannot be done without using for steel mill machinery the very steel desperately needed today for weapons.

Canada's whole munitions program is an integral part of the United Steel problem. It is from the United States that Canada must get much steel to make all kinds of weapons — and Canada cannot expect any more steel than it is getting now. Unless the situation changes for the better. Canada's potential output of weapons is definitely restricted by the output of United States steel plants.

Canada's own steel production is going up slowly. The present annual output of 3,600,000 tons will reach something under 4,000,000 tons next year. From the United States Canada is receiving about 1,500,000 tons a year and will not get much more than that, even though Canada has a priority rating as high as the United States own shipyards.

But steel, vital as it is, does not represent the chief munitions bottleneck in Canada. Trained workers, trained managers, experts are harder to get than steel.

"GADGETS" FINISHED

The present steel demands of this continent are almost beyond imagination. Shipyards, munitions factories and railways all cry out for steel and could use far more than it is possible to produce. The only way to provide enough steel for vital munitions industries is to starve all civilian industries, even to starve the railways. This will be done.

Here the United States is running into the grave problems of priorities. The present system of distributing vital war materials has broken down. Too much steel is going to one factory, not enough to another. Somehow civilian industries have gone short. A new system of allocating materials is being worked out now and will shortly become operative. Perhaps it will even go so far as to seize supplies of vital materials already received by civilian industries.

Mr. Nelson's organization has almost completed a survey of supplies on hand and the requirements of the major metal working industries. When he has these facts he will be in a position to allocate supplies of scarce metals much more effectively than is possible under a priorities system. In brief, the government will ration not railroads, car and civilian, in all supplies that are short.

The shortage in some lines is extremely grave—in copper, for example, and many rare but essential metals. Mr. Nelson cannot allow these metals to make tools that will not produce for a year. He is throwing everything he can get into the production of 1942 when the war may be won and can be lost. By doing so he will so squeeze civilian industries that practically no metal objects will be made for the use of civilians after the present material supplies of the civilian factories run out. For the consumer in the United States and Canada the age of metals, of gadgets, is finished for the duration. Only thus will it be possible to carry out the munitions program which only now is beginning to roll.

Hearing Rene Chaloult Case Is Adjourned

MONTREAL, June 6.—(CP)—Judge Edouard Archambault took under advisement today until June 12 a defence objection raised at the start of the case of Rene Chaloult, Liberal member of the Quebec legislative assembly, on a charge laid under the Defence of Canada regulations.

The hearing then was adjourned to that date without a plea being entered by Mr. Chaloult to the charge, which arose from a public address made here May 19. Justice Minister St. Laurent announced in parliament May 27 that proceedings would be instituted against the Quebec member, who represents Lotbiniere in the assembly.

SEVERAL OBJECTIONS

Defence counsel, Fernand Choquette of Quebec and Philippe Monette of Montreal, raised several objections to the charge, first asking whether the complaint was authorized by the minister of justice as required by Article 39 of the defence regulations.

A second objection was raised regarding the validity of the trial or by means of summary conviction.

The third objection, which Judge Archambault took under advisement, concerned a defence claim that the charge listed eight accusations. Mr. Choquette contended that each of the accusations should be a separate complaint.

Gerald Fauteux, crown prosecutor, said the complaint was worded as prescribed by the Defence of Canada Regulations Act, but there was only one violation of the law.

CHARGES IN COMPLAINT

The complaint charged Mr. Chaloult with making declarations and affirmations before several thousand persons which would cause dissatisfaction to the King; prejudice the success of His Majesty's armies and the armies of the Allied Nations and their associates; prejudice recruiting and training and discipline of His Majesty's armies; prejudice the security of the state and the successful prosecution of the war.

The complaint said the statements were made at and during a speech delivered by the accused, which was quoted substantially in a 10-page typewritten report attached to the complaint.

Mr. Monette said the use of the word "substantially" indicated the report was not a short-hand verbatim transcription.

OBJECTION DISMISSED

In answer to the first objection raised by the defence, Crown Prosecutor Fauteux produced authorization from the justice minister to proceed with the prosecution. Judge Archambault dismissed the second objection when the crown prosecutor argued that the complaint indicated that the accused had chosen the summary conviction trial.

Mr. Monette said that British justice recognized the right of an accused person to appear before a jury, adding it would be in the best public interest if the crown would grant the right for a jury trial.

The case had been placed in the hands of Chief Crown Prosecutor Gerald Fauteux last week by Justice Minister St. Laurent, who previously had announced in parliament that proceedings would be instituted against Mr. Chaloult.

ST. LAURENT STATEMENT

Mr. St. Laurent told the house at that time legal advisers in the justice department had given the opinion that the May 19 address "as reported in the newspapers clearly disclosed a seditious intention, and constitutes an offense against the Defence of Canada Regulations." Mr. St. Laurent said he agreed with that opinion.

On May 22, however, Mr. Chaloult, in the Quebec legislature, had said that the newspapers had not his Montreal speech "were not strictly accurate, and conveyed an impression which was not warranted by the language he had used."

"In view of this dispute as to the facts," Mr. St. Laurent said, "it has been decided to institute proceedings against Mr. Chaloult under the Defence of Canada regulations, in the district in which the offence is alleged to have been committed."

HELP URGENTLY NEEDED

Refugees Describe Horror Of Starvation In Athens

One of the most tragic stories of the war is the suffering and starvation imposed on Greece by the German and Italian armies of occupation. Richard G. Massock, chief of the former Associated Press bureau in Rome, obtained this graphic story while interned in Italy and from refugees and relief workers returning to the United States on the repatriation ship, Drottningholm.—EDITOR.

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK

NEW YORK, June 6—(AP)—Refugees from famine-scourged Greece report that Athens is a starving city, subsisting principally at public soup kitchens with an average of 500 persons dying daily from slow, torturing starvation.

The puppet government of General Tsolakoglou, serving the interests of the German conquerors, has deserted the Greek people in their crisis, report observers who returned with me to the United States on the repatriation ship Drottningholm.

Only with American assistance in the importation of thousands of tons of food monthly can the famine be held in check, relief workers say. German and Italian authorities have promised to respect relief shipments from the United States.

BLINDED RESPONSIBILITY

German authorities disclaim responsibility for the feeding of conquered nations like Greece.

One refugee reported that when a Greek woman asked a German official for permission to use some local milk for babies, she was told the Greek milk supply was hardly sufficient to meet the wants of German aviators stationed in Athens. German soldiers raid the potato patches which the Greeks plant for themselves.

Italian authorities have been less indifferent to the needs of the Greek populace, but the severe food shortage in Italy has left little surplus for relief work among the Greeks.

The public kitchens are maintained by relief organizations and are serving more than 600,000 persons in Athens—about three-fourths of the population—with a daily meal containing olive oil, rice and dried vegetables. It provides calories sufficient to maintain life at a minimum subsistence level.

Stinking, ragged columns of men, women and children, who no longer wash even with water alone now that there is no soap, pick over the garbage of Germans and Italians.

HUNT CITY DUMPS

In processions, the Athenians go to the city dumps. When one finds a carcass or other food scrap, he cleans the inside with his tongue as a cat would do.

The hospitals are overcrowded, with sometimes three or four starving patients in a bed. The courtyards of the morgues are filled with naked bodies. Three hundred bodies at a time are buried in large pits, without lime.

When people die, relatives place the corpses in the gutters without reporting the deaths so that they won't have to surrender the bread cards of the deceased.

Food prices on the black market have leaped to such heights that only the wealthy can afford to buy food. Beans, which cost less than 50 cents a pound before the war, for example, now cost as much as $6.60 a pound. Food has disappeared everywhere but on the black market.

Moral bankruptcy, with a wave of criminality, accompanies the famine. Athens authorities report 30 times more crimes than a year ago.

"To delay death from starvation, the Greeks are using every means, legal, illegal or criminal," one qualified observer reported. "All crimes are committed by the starving. The habitual criminals have long since died of starvation in prison."

15,000 Workers Will Be Needed On Alaska Road

HAMILTON, June 6. — (CP) — Plans for a start on the 1,500-mile highway from Dawson Creek, B.C., to Alaska are well developed and work on the great road will be rushed, it was learned in Hamilton, president and general manager of a contracting company sharing in the general contract said yesterday after conferring with United States officials in Washington.

Mr. Evans said 15,000 men would be required on the first 65-mile stretch which will be constructed by Canadian companies. In order to obtain help, employment offices would be established by the contractors in Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton and other Canadian centres.

Each contractor will be responsible for housing his men and will establish kitchens and other accommodation. These services will be operated under supervision of the United States government.

R. M. Smith, Ontario deputy minister of highways, has been loaned for work on this project and is acting in an advisory capacity. It is understood that he will be in charge of sections to be constructed by Canadian companies.

7 Jap U-Boats Sunk In Week Off Australia

By BRYDON C. TAVES

MELBOURNE, June 6.—(BUP)—A Japanese submarine has sunk a second merchantman off the southeast coast but is believed to have paid with its life, to bring the total of enemy undersea craft destroyed in six days to seven and probably eight, it was announced today.

The Japanese submersible, lurking off the New South Wales state coast in the new offensive against the vital Pacific supply line from the United States, torpedoed an Australian merchantman. The stricken ship broke in halves and sank within 30 seconds.

Brydon Taves

But as it sank with probably 38 of its 43 men trapped inside, an Allied reconnaissance plane roared over and its avenging bombs were believed to have sunk the submarine.

Racing to the rescue, the plane swept to within 20 feet of the five survivors struggling in the water. It dropped three bombs. After the third struck the water, a big explosion was heard, apparently inside the submarine.

The survivors were brought ashore by an Allied ship which was in sight when the submarine attacked.

The second of four submarines sunk in Sydney harbor was moved to a base for examination by experts today. It was similar in appearance to the first one salvaged, about 70 feet long.

Examining the first submarine, experts said that despite its length it was still in the midget class and probably had a crew of two.

Coast Radios Off Air Again Friday Night

VANCOUVER, June 6.—(CP)—For the third successive night since the Japanese attack on Dutch Harbor, Alaska, Pacific Coast radio stations went off the air last night at 9 p.m. P.D.T. (10 p.m. M.D.T.), resuming broadcasting this morning.

Civilian defence precautions generally were tightened up with air raid precaution wardens holding intensive drills in many districts.

At Victoria last night Maj. Gen. R. O. Alexander, general officer commanding, Pacific command, said the attack on Dutch Harbor "was not unexpected" and "has not altered our plans in the Pacific command, as every officer now and always has been very much on the alert."

Acting-Mayor Archie Wills of Victoria has wired Pensions Minister Ian Mackenzie seeking a speed-up of civilian defence equipment deliveries to Victoria.

The navy department of Prince Rupert continued to observe a precautionary blackout but in other British Columbia cities lighting was unaffected beyond the "dim-out" of exterior advertising and un-blended lights which has been in effect for several months.

Canadian Army Most Powerful Human History

TORONTO, June 6.—(CP)—J. W. G. Clark, director of public relations for the national defence department, last night described the Canadian army overseas as "one of the greatest and most powerful armies in human history" and asserted that the army will play the "last, victorious scene" in the battle against totalitarianism.

Mr. Clark told a dinner meeting of the Association of Canadian Advertisers that "only something superhuman" could stop the "compact and deadly" force under Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton if it launched the long-awaited drive on the European continent.

He praised the association for its efforts on behalf of army week June 29 to July 5 and declared that the seven days set aside for the men in battledress will be a period "that will long be remembered."

AWAITING CUE

"And remembered it shall be," he said, "for Canada had an army to be proud of . . . waiting with disciplined patience for its entrance cue in this international tragedy."

If Germany attacked the British Isles, it would be case of "God help the Germans," for they would meet "head on, and raring to go," the Canadian army.

Mr. Clark warned that "from now on, the people will have to content themselves with being given less factual news and data about the size of operations of our fighting forces."

"TURN TO HELP"

Three Defence Ministers Approve Expedition Of Canadians To Hong Kong

OTTAWA, June 6.—(CP)—The British government's proposal that Canada send an expedition to help defend Hong Kong met with almost immediate approval by the Dominion's three defence ministers, it is disclosed in the appendix to Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff's report on his inquiry into dispatch and organization of the force. The documents were tabled in the House of Commons yesterday.

The British invitation for Canada to send two infantry battalions to the Far East colony was received Sept. 19 last year. For security reasons it was not included in the report.

The matter came before the war committee of the cabinet Sept. 23 and was approved, subject to concurrence by Defence Minister Ralston, who was at that time in Los Angeles.

MINISTERS' EVIDENCE

The evidence of Defence Minister Ralston, Air Minister Power and Navy Minister Macdonald "shows explicitly that to them, and to the war committee as a whole, the proposal summaries what they regarded as reasons of great weight which, taken together with the broader considerations that as mentioned by them in their evidence, dictated an affirmative answer," said the appendix to Sir Lyman's report.

Following are quotations from the ministers' evidence:

COL. RALSTON—"It seemed as if it was Canada's turn to help. That is to say, Australia had been doing a great deal in Libya and elsewhere; the New Zealanders had been in Crete; and the South Africans had been in Abyssinia. I am not sure whether I knew that the Australians had gone to Singapore or not. Then the United States had strengthened their garrisons in the Philippines, and that also influenced us in connection with it."

MAJ. POWER—"I do not think there was ever any question really or any discussion as between Gen. Crerar (Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, then chief of general staff) and myself as to any reason why we should not take it on. It struck me as being the only thing to do, and I suppose it struck Gen. Crerar that way too; at least I took it for grant, od that it did."

MR. MACDONALD—"I do not think anyone could contemplate in the circumstances of the time, negative answer to the request. I do not think it was thinkable for this country to offer a negative answer to the request of the United Kingdom."

Evidence of discussions at the cabinet war committee was given to Sir Lyman after cabinet ministers had obtained from the governor-general special permission to disclose matters which came within the scope of their oaths of secrecy.

Following the committee meeting a telegram was sent to Col. Ralston advising him of the invitation and explaining that Gen. Crerar concurred in the proposal if Col. Ralston did not object, and that the war committee was prepared to accept the proposal but wanted the reaction of the minister.

The telegram said if Col Ralston desired more time for consideration it was not pressing for an immediate answer.

APPROVED VENTURE

Col. Ralston telephoned that evening to Gen. Crerar, who wrote in a memorandum at that time "that I had definitely recommended that the Canadian army should take this on."

The memorandum in reference to Col. Ralston's reaction read: "He (Col Ralston) said that on that basis he approved in principle acceptance by Canada of the responsibility."

On Sept. 29 Maj. Power advised the British government of Canada's acceptance of its proposal.

The chief justice said the evidence of Gen. Crerar was taken in England where he now is stationed as officer commanding a Canadian corps.

Gen. Grasett, former commander one summer he had discussed the Hong Kong defences with Lt.-Gen. Grasett, former commander at Hong Kong who was on his way to England. He had learned lahi in Gen. Grasett's opinion the garrison with two or more additional battalions could hold Hong Kong "for an extended period against any force the Japanese could bring to bear in the attack."

The evidence, Sir Lyman reported, showed the information in the hands of the Canadian government in September and October was to the effect that war with Japan was not imminent.

It was also considered that, even in the event of war, the situation of the Hong Kong garrison was not hopeless since naval forces in the Pacific were being strengthened.

EXPECTED NAVAL AID

"In the event of a Japanese attack on Hong Kong it was considered reasonable to expect that the garrison could be relieved or evacuated from the sea by the use of combined British and American naval forces," the appendix stated.

The government was informed the Chinese government had undertaken to attack the Japanese rear with 10 divisions if the Japanese attacked Hong Kong. The losses suffered by the United states fleet at Pearl Harbor and the loss of the British warships Repulse and Prince of Wales "radically altered the situation and gave to the Japanese, for the time being, command of the China seas."

Nothing occurred between Sept. 29, when the decision was made to send the expedition, and Oct. 27, the date of the departure, to warrant the withdrawal of Canada from the responsibility accepted, the judge found.

"It was urged by Dr. Drew (Lt.-Col. George Drew, nominated by Conservative house leader Hanson as a commission counsel) that the change of government in Japan on the 16th of October ought to have led the Canadian government to reconsider its decision," Sir Lyman said.

"I am satisfied that the Canadian government did not overlook the significance of events in Japan and that they acted under the conviction that, having regard to the situation as they were acquainted with it, there was nothing in these events that would justify a departure from the course they had decided upon."

"Statemen and soldiers can properly be held accountable for a reasonably capable practical judgment as to such probabilities but not on the assumption that they must have had anterior knowledge of subsequent events.

"Thus, after examining all the evidence bearing on the question of the authorization of the expedition I can find no dereliction of duty or error in judgment either on the part of the government of Canada or its military advisers, in the decision to accept the proposal of the United Kingdom to send a Canadian force to Hong Kong and the despatch of the force pursuant to that decision."

High Morale In Britain Due To Social Advances

TORONTO, June 8.—(CP)—High morale of the British people was attributed by M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. house leader, to "the fact that day by day they see the beginning of new economic and social policies which persuade them that when the war is over they will build a better Britain."

He told the Rotary Club here that "Canadians have no such assurance yet."

Grave problems would face the post-war world, Mr. Coldwell said, and one of the greatest for Canada would be the rehabilitation of thousands of men and women—not only those demobilized from the various branches of the fighting forces, but also those unemployed through the conversion of war industries to peacetime production.

Salvage Group Sends 750,000 Lbs. Materials To Munitions Plants

By TOM SHANDRO

More than 750,000 pounds of supposedly useless materials have commenced their journey to munitions plants as the result of the efforts of the Edmonton Salvage Committee during the first four months of its activity. Forty-two percent of this mountain of material that last year would have been destroyed or left lying about to rot, consisted of paper; 35 per cent was metal; 19 percent was rubber and the remainder was made up of varying quantities of fats, bones, rags and unclassified goods.

Thanks to the response of the citizens, urban and rural, and specially to several hundred women, this result far exceeds the wildest expectations of the members of the Edmonton Junior Chamber of Commerce who took over the heavy task of organizing the campaign last January.

It was on March 21 that the first real drive for salvage got under way when a ten-day house-to-house pick-up campaign was launched. During that time, a group of women who had temporarily organized themselves as a women's auxiliary to the salvage committee, "took the bull by the horns," rolled up their sleeves and kept the pick-ups humming for the ten days and are continuing to do so in a more modified manner from that time on.

VARIED ARTICLES

They drove trucks, acted as truck drivers' helpers, directed the routing of trucks, kept a battery of seven telephones in operation and assisted in the sorting.

Since then they have organized themselves into the Women's Auxiliary to the Salvage Committee, have boosted their membership to more than 350, and are at present engaged at the main salvage depot at 120 street and 106 avenue, in sorting materials, preparing them for shipment, and attending to most of the stenographical, telephone and clerical work.

This arrangement calls for at least 20 women daily from Monday through Friday. On Saturday the members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce take over and have organized groups working every Saturday afternoon and during most of the holidays. Trucking and salvage sorting are their usual jobs.

SMALL PAID STAFF

At the present time there is a paid staff of four at the salvage depot and two in the office. They are essential, but salaries and wages are kept to a low level. No members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce receives any payment for his work.

Organization work has of necessity occupied much of the time the members of the central committee. Sub-depots had to be located, organized, maintained and emptied at regular intervals.

The main depot had to be remodelled to accomodate the different types of materials. Loading facilities had to be temporarily set up. At the present one of the most urgent needs at the main depot is a loading platform.

WELL DONE

Thanks to the generosity of the C.N.R. in donating a large number of bridge timbers, and to the ambition of Junior Chamber members in offering their services free, this $1,500 job is being erected at an estimated cost of $200.

During the first four months of the campaign there was no effort made to make regular calls at the city homes. This was found impossible and all pickups made to date have been by volunteer truck-men and car owners.

A regular system however will be instituted shortly as the result of negotiations between the civic officials and campaign members. An original plan of city-sponsored regular pickups was discarded when it was revealed that such a scheme would cost the city about $45,000 annually.

The campaign committee finally got results by asking for an advance of $4,000 from the city for the purchase of trucks.

FOUR TRUCKS OPERATE

At present there are four trucks in operation and before long the committee hopes to have three more in action and then will be able to organize a city-wide pick-up system.

At the moment the committee's efforts are concentrated on two objectives: the determination to get every available bit of scrap rubber collected, and to put the main depot in such shape as to enable introduction of the house-to-house pickup service at the earliest possible date.

One glance at the congested conditions at the main depot is sufficient to convince one of the dire need of assistance to sort and arrange the materials at hand before the regular pickups are commenced.

SERVICE STATIONS HELP

Every service station in the city is acting as a rubber receiving depot and the salvage trucks in turn, are picking up the accumulated supplies.

The progress chart of salts made during the early sages of the campaign indicates that May was the first month in which the campaign really hits its stride. In February the committee sold $25 worth of salvage, in March $130 worth, in April $400 worth and in May the returns were $1,300.

These are the financial returns from the sale of about 100 tons of scrap metal, 85 tons of paper, three tons of bones, 1200 pounds of fats, 20 tons o unclassified salvage, and 32 tons of rubber.

At the main depot and at the sub-depots at the end of May was about 60 tons of bottles and glass, 75 tons of paper, 35 tons of rubber, 28 tons of rags, 25 tons of scrap metal and three tons of bones.

These figures show that the salvage committee has been making progress but there is still much in the way of perfecting the organization before it will be able to achieve maximum results.

The energetic committeee, made up of Junior Chamber members and representatives of the Women's Auxiliary, feels however that numerous difficulties still standing in the way will be overcome and that there will be established in Edmonton a salvage campaign, run on sound business-like lines, that will be second to none in Canada.

The committee has no doubt that this end will be achieved as long as they can obtain the fullest co-operation from everyone.

Heavy Damage Is Caused By Flood Blairmore Area

BLAIRMORE, June 6 — (CP) — Swollen by two days of steady rain, the Crow's Nest river overflowed North Blairmore, yesterday, isolating about 15 homes and driving a number of families to higher ground. Three sections of the Blairmore-Frank highway were under water; about eight homes in the region were isolated; the Turtle city homes. This was found impossible and all pickups made to date have been by volunteer truck-men and car owners.

A regular system however will be instituted shortly as the result of negotiations between the civic officials and campaign members. An original plan of city-sponsored regular pickups was discarded when it was revealed that such a scheme would cost the city about $45,000 annually.

The campaign committee finally got results by asking for an advance of $4,000 from the city for the purchase of trucks.

Interpreting War News

ranging so far eastward in the upper Pacific, Nimitz and the personnel of his command may have a glittering opportunity to avenge comrades who died on that "day of infamy" at Pearl Harbor last December.

Certainly, one or more strong Japanese naval task forces are operating on the northern segment of the great American defence triangle in the Pacific. Alaska-Hawaii-Panama.

DEFENSIVE ACTION

If that portends a Japanese attempt to crack these outer bastions of American defence, the main strength of Japan's fighting fleet also must be involved. If so, an opportunity may be looming to come to grips with it in a decisive action —the day for which American naval personnel has yearned from the Admiral's bridge to the seating black gangs which feed the furnaces.

What Nimitz has revealed of the Midway Island clash is encouraging. A bruising blow has been struck at a Japanese sea-air force which included at least one battleship as well as cruisers and plane carriers.

If, as some speculation on Japanese purpose has it, the Dutch Harbor and Midway raids were intended as preliminaries or diversions to cover an attempt to shatter the Hawaiian central cog of the American battle position in the Pacific, the stinging new repulse for the enemy at Midway has another portent. It is a certain foretaste of the sort of reception any Japanese force will encounter in Hawaii.

The Refunding Problem

The committee representing holders of provincial bonds is to meet on Monday with a committee of the Government in an attempt to work out a plan for refunding the provincial debt. The matter is of tremendous importance, involving the interest rates and the terms of repayment respecting some $121,000,000 of these securities.

It is to be hoped that a readjustment can be evolved which will be fair and reasonable alike to the bondholders and to the taxpayers. The present position is obviously not satisfactory to either party, and the conference is the result of a desire on both sides to make an acceptable settlement. It will be to the advantage of both if this results from the negotiations. The proceedings will therefore be watched with keen interest, and a sincere desire on the part of the public that agreement may be reached.

Where Doesn't Matter

As one result of the Dutch Harbor raid, it is predicted that the defence regulations will be widened so as to permit Canadian reserve forces to be sent to any part of this continent, including Newfoundland and other non-Canadian islands in either ocean.

That should be done, as a matter of course. There was never a good reason for pretending that "the defence of Canada" could not under any circumstances require Canadian troops to cross the border of the Dominion, even to help repel an attack on Newfoundland, on Greenland, or on Alaska. In light of what happened at Dutch Harbor and of the plain implications therefrom, this parochial view is too obviously absurd to deceive even those who refuse to see that the real defence of Canada will have to be made in Europe or in the Orient.

An attack or a threatened attack upon any part of this hemisphere is a blow at the security of Canada. Against such attack or threat Canadian defence troops should be immediately available, wherever the defending may have to be done.

They Did It Again

A commando force celebrated the second anniversary of Dunkirk by raiding the French coast between Boulogne and Le Touquet. The raiders stayed ashore an hour, shot up some Nazi strong points, got enemy troops firing at each other, sunk a patrol boat, and came away with slight casualties, having accomplished their mission.

What that particular mission was the dispatches do not say. But the incident shows, as former raids have shown, that even the most closely watched coast in Europe is vulnerable to sudden attack, even by landing parties. What the Japanese did at Pearl Harbor was a simple trick in comparison with thrusting a body of ground troops through the network of defences on that Nazi-held coastal region and getting them out again.

Perhaps the general purpose of the commando raids is to test the supposed "impregnable" defence system the enemy has built up along the western shores of the occupied countries. In any case these are being tested, and found to have loopholes through which trained men can penetrate. The information will be useful some day. Meanwhile, it shows that even the Nazis can be taken by surprise.

Leave It To The Provinces

Three of the provinces have asked the Dominion to amend the old age pension scheme. The Alberta proposal is that the maximum be raised to one dollar per day, and the age limit dropped to 60 years. Manitoba suggests a maximum of $300 per year, with no deduction unless private income brings the total income of a pensioner to more than $425. British Columbia says it is prepared to pay 25 per cent of whatever increase the Dominion may agree to.

These are all western provinces, and none of them is comparable to Ontario or Quebec in population, taxpaying or parliamentary representation. But that does not invalidate the proposals, nor make them impossible of adoption. When the old age pension scheme was set up the provinces were left to accept or ignore it individually as they might choose. The same arrangement could be made in amending the plan.

The provinces which are willing to bring the position of their pensioners into line with present day conditions should not be denied because some others may refuse to take the like course. If the provinces which refuse—if any do refuse—take the onus of doing so. There is no reason why the Dominion should incur blame, by delaying action, because of their parsimony.

Put Hooks In The Law

Coupon rationing is to be introduced because voluntary rationing has broken down. It did not break down because Canadians in the mass refused to keep the rules which would make available supplies ge round; they did keep those rules. It failed because an obdurate minority insisted on living "as usual," regardless of the consequence to their neighbors, to the nation's war effort, and to the seamen who have to bring foreign supplies through submarine-infested waters.

It can be taken as certain that those who chiselled under voluntary rationing will try to chisel under the coupon system. If there is any way to side-step the regulations and get more than their fair share of this, that and the other thing, they will do it. If the end is to be attained these regulations will have to be made rigid, the enforcement machinery all-observant and automatic in its operations.

Those who have loyally observed the rules under the voluntary system are entitled to expect that the strictest kind of watch will be kept for grabbers under the coupon system, and that punishment will fall upon violators without regard to financial or social position. Since we are going to have to stand the expense of running a nation-wide scheme for the official doling out of supplies, those who try to get more than is due to them must come in for certain and severe penalties.

At an eastern port the keels have been laid of the first two destroyers to be built in Canada. Against the appalling economic waste of war must be placed the fact that in wartime constructive enterprise surges ahead at a pace never approached in time of peace. Sales of new cars in Canada during April totalled only $2,343,842, against $20,883,129 in April of last year. It cannot be called "sacrifice" to do without a new car when other men are dying to save freedom, but the figures show how signally civilian production has given way to war production—with the consent and approval of the great mass of our people.

Looking Backward

From The Bulletin Files

1892 — 50 Years Ago

In the wild efforts that have been made from time to time—on paper at least—to settle up the Northwest from Europe without drawing on the population of the eastern provinces, there has been a vast deal of misdirected energy; or rather a large part of the energy used has been misdirected. The effort has been to draw men of capital without, social knowledge, and men who had neither capital or experience, simply laborers . . . to neither class does the Northwest, in its present condition, offer a field.

Settlement is increasing along the North Thompson river, British Columbia, to such an extent that the old pack trail has been replaced along a portion of the distance by a waggon road, and now the wagon road has become inadequate. The Kamloops Sentinel wants the river improved to permit of steamboat navigation. The North Thompson was on the Mackenzie route of the C.P.R. and occupied that part of it which parallels the present line through the Selkirk range, with its heavy grades and snow slides. The Mackenzie line would have been more easily built, more easily operated, and would have developed local traffic as the present line does not.

Security At No Cost

By HAROLD L. WEIR

During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1942, it is announced, the Federal Government's contribution to Old Age Pensions paid in the Dominion was $28,530,907.

This is an appalling figure and doubtless will provide a sort of fictitious ammunition for opponents of social security and for those who would postpone any elaborate social security program.

Harold L. Weir

As a matter of fact, this figure is appalling only because it indicates what the delay in launching an adequate social security program is costing the country.

If social security were launched in Canada on a comprehensive and scientific basis, Old Age Pensions would not cost the public a single cent.

They would not cost the country anything because young people would begin to contribute infinitesimal weekly sums to Health Insurance, Unemployment Insurance and Retirement Allowances the very minute they began to earn money, and out of those very small weekly payments would be built up funds capable of bearing the cost of an entire social security structure without taking one dollar from the national treasury.

Publication of this figure of $28,530,907 shows two things:

1. It shows how urgent is the need for a complete overhauling of the social security system in Canada, and its establishment on a new, sound basis, and,

2. It shows how urgent is the need for the launching of an adequate program right now while employment and salaries are at a peak in Canada.

Opposition

It would be futile to deny that a great deal of antagonism to social security exists in Canada.

This antagonism stems from a few economic forces who see such figures as the above and hastily conclude that social security is too costly when, as a matter of fact, the size of this figure merely indicates how poorly based is the Old Age Pension system.

It stems, in the second place, from those who regard that any kind of state assistance to the individual tends to destroy individual character and authority.

There is not much to say about the first group of objectors. Their reasoning is manifestly in error.

By basing all social security measures on individual contribution over a period of years, it is possible to have security at absolutely no cost to the state.

The second group of objectors need more careful treatment because, in principle, what they say is utterly true.

A spoon - fed generation is usually a helpless and useless generation. It has too much leisure, too many comforts, too much ease of life are definitely bad for anybody. It is possible to completely spoil an entire generation by sheltering them from the hardships and work and trials which should develop self-reliance, courage, initiative and character.

Mistaken

But where the rugged individualists run into error is in the supposition that social security relieves a person of any of these hardening trials.

It is absurd to say that the prospect of a secure old age, for instance, will make the character when the prospective recipient himself supplies, over a period of years, the monetary basis of that security. One might just as well attack thrift because thrift, under certain circumstances, provides security and freedom from worry.

Conversely, I have yet to see the individual who was spurred to more effective and intelligent efforts because of the knowledge that a penniless old age lay ahead.

Fear of sickness, fear of unemployment and fear of an indigent old age are definitely not spurs to effort. On the contrary, because they create worry, they cut down the productiveness of the individual and warp, rather than strengthen, his character.

Changes

It is true that the pioneers contributed heavily and efficiently to the growth of this country without the measures of social legislation.

Unemployment, of course, was not a factor in their day.

But how many of them can say that they would not have done even better work and evolved even stronger characters had they had access to a fund which would have cared for their health and made it unnecessary for them to postpone seeking medical advice because of fear of debt?

So far as the security of their old age is concerned, the bitterest commentary on a lack of social security is contained in the fact that so many of those pioneers have been forced to apply for the Old Age Pension in the declining years of their lives.

Surely life is capable of administering sufficient blows to harden and develop character without ceaselessly lending a hand by exposing the hapless individual to the threats of ill-health, unemployment in a changed world and a dependent old age.

Surely fate has enough barbed arrows in her quiver to touch up human initiative without calling in disease, poverty and fear as her allies.

Seeds For England

Editor, Bulletin: My sister in England sends me a note which might interest some of your readers. It states:

"The Americans have made a charming, generous and most useful gesture by sending to English villages small packets of cultural societies free packets of vegetable seeds. It must have cost them thousands of pounds. I got mine yesterday.

"Each little box is shared with a friend or neighbor. All are alike and contain five packets each of ¼-oz. seeds of parsnip, beet, carrot, turnip, onion, cabbage, lettuce and parsley, and two beans, ½-lb. of peas. On the box is printed: "A gift of seeds to you from a friend in America. Sent by the British War Relief Society, New York City."

Said the other, "My wife does better than that. She went straight to the market gardener and insisted on choosing a vegetable marrow that was still growing. "How much for this one?" she said. "Eightpence," said the gardener. "Too much," she said. "What is the price of this little one?' "Fourpence," was the reply. "All right, I'll buy it,' and pays on the spot. Then she added, 'Don't cut it now, I'll call for it this day fortnight."

The Shoes Are On Other Feet Now

Italy's Chains Drawn Tighter

By WAVERLEY ROOT IN THE MONTREAL STAR

Reports published from Lisbon by American correspondents returning from Italy have revived the hope felt about the time of the last Hitler - Mussolini meeting that Italy, in miserable subjection to Germany, might seek the first opportunity to make a separate peace. These hopes can be classified into two groups: those which centre about the possibility of making a deal with Mussolini, and those which concentrate on the possibility of working through opponents of Mussolini, who might seize the government and switch to the Allies.

Information received by this column does not support either of these optimistic hypotheses. There does not seem any present likelihood of wooing Italy away from Germany. If anything, the possibility is slimmer now than it was last year. This is true for two reasons.

The first is the simple fact that Germany's direct grip on Italy has tightened more in the last few months, that there is in Italy no lever of government upon which the Axis fist does not maintain a tight grip.

A German officer is attached to every regiment of the Italian army, and though he exercises his command through Italian officers, he is the real colonel of the regiment. There is a German commissioner on every Italian ship. Its Italian captain takes orders from him. There is a German supervisor in every Italian factory. Its native manager must maintain the quota ordered by his German overseer, must consult his business as the German commands. The Gestapo now exercises stern repression over the population without concealment. There is a German at every key desk in every department of Italian administration. Mussolini himself can have no governmental order executed if the Germans who sit beside the Italian civil servants have not been told by Berlin that it is not to be carried out.

No Escape

Italy is chained hand and foot, the prisoner of the Reich, without possibility of escape. There is simply no machinery through which any Italian, Mussolini or anyone else could negotiate separately with the Allies without the knowledge of the Germans.

Any feeling thrown out from Italy were made with German knowledge and approval. There have been moments, and may be moments again, when it would be more advantageous to Germany if Italy reverted to the condition of neutrality than if she remained Germany's ally. So far psychological considerations have prevented Italy's return to neutrality from being taken up seriously. But it is within the bounds of possibility that at some time in the future, Germany might decide that the neutrality of Italy would be desirable.

If Italy ever does open negotiations for a separate peace, you can be assured that that is what has happened.

The second reason why hopes of detaching Italy from the Axis are unfounded is that both Mussolini's supporters and those who criticize him severely for having led Italy into her present predicament, are agreed that now that Italy is in it there is only one possible issue—to play the Hitler card 100 per cent.

The reason is as follows:

If Hitler wins, Italy's chances of getting a good share of the spoils depend upon the extent to which she has seconded Germany's game up to the moment of victory.

On the other hand, if Italy waits for a moment when a shift on her part might be crucial, the value of that shift to the Allies will depend upon how strong a factor she is in the Axis lineup. In other words, the more valuable Italy makes herself to Germany, the more she will have to offer the Allies, and the more she can ask in exchange.

Might Collect Soon

Finally, it is within Germany's power to give Italy the French territories she covets, and Laval's inability to deliver to Germany the price of retaining French territory inviolate makes it look as if the moment, as though she might collect soon.

The Italians are trying to promote this last angle by pointing out to Hitler the danger of a second front being opened in North Africa and perhaps being directed towards Italy as well—hence the recent Italian broadcasts and newspaper stories, stressing the massing of British and American troops in these regions. For her defence, Italy pointed out, she needs to take over Tunisia and Corsica from France.

Virginio Gayda, Mussolini's mouthpiece, has stated in the Giornale d'Italia that Germany supports Italy's claims fully. This column is able to add that Hitler has formally promised these territories to Mussolini.

Mussolini means to see to it that his troops have what they need, and he is doing everything in his power to make Italy a worthy recipient in Germany eyes of the promised gifts. At this moment he is conducting a rigorous purge of the Italian civilian administrations, and a similar purge is being carried on in the army.

And the army purge is being directed by Crown Prince Umberto, who has been represented for years as a bitter enemy of Mussolini, but who is now working with him hand in glove!

He Wants To Live 20 Years More

By JOHN J. FREELAND IN THE OTTAWA JOURNAL

I should like to live another twenty years. That I should then be far into my eighth decade makes it very improbable that I shall. But I should like to. Not from any mere clinging as an Autumn leaf to the bough of Time but rather from an intense curiosity to see what will become of the brave new world which man's incredible courage is about to make out of the appalling debacle of the old.

One would be inclined to think that man's wisdom would help to repair the ravages of man's folly. Yet, when the locust years exact their toll, when Life's I.O.U.'s fall due, it seems fatefully true that wisdom is not enough. That payment can then be made only in the precious coin of blood and sweat and toil and tears. So it is that I should like to live to see the world that will succeed. A such dear but worth-while price.

There have been so many worlds in my years. Four in my own lifetime.

Pax Britannica

There was, first for me, that world of Pax Britannica into which I was born and in which I grew to manhood. It was, on the whole, a goodly world. Secure, tolerant, stodgy in its will; but gentle, kindly, church - going. With enough hypocrisy to make it interesting, but not enough declined to thank their Maker that they were not as others the feeling, perhaps, of complacency. A safe world, a secure world; for whenever or wherever security was threatened, a British man-of-war loomed over the horizon and all was well.

It was a world in which Eire was Ireland, with the tear and the smile in her eye. In which Iran was Persia, Thailand was Siam, and Iraq was Mesopotamia in which Turkey was the Sick Man of Europe; Teddy Roosevelt wielded the Big Stick and Li Hung Chang was the wise man of China. In which men were regent individuality and beauty in seats in street cars to their women folk; in which diphtheria was a death-sentence and the appendix something at the back of a book.

This world saw the Diamond Jubilee of Victoria the Good. Saw military reputations buried deep in the South African veldt. Saw Russia humbled by the little brown man of Japan. Saw, too, an Empire that had been midwife at the birth of the American wiped off the map in a few swift moments of war by a people who insisted on remembering the Maine, as they are today remembering Pearl Harbor.

It was, I remember, a goodly world. Wars, of course. But, with the exception of Japan, nations fought chivalrously and with dignity. Even when a truce was a truce, not a Damoclesian sword suspended by an ersatz Spanish incident. Saw that world dwarfed by the Austrian and Czecho-Slovakian incidents. Saw the Manchurian incident, the Ethiopian incident, the China incident, the Spanish incident. Saw that world overwhelmed by the blood bath of the Reich. Looked on at the Manchurian incident, the Ethiopian incident, the China incident, the Spanish incident. Saw that world dwarfed by the Austrian and Czecho-Slovakian incidents. Saw the world of democracy shamefully acquiesce. Saw that, though a war had been won, the salt of victory had lost its savor. That it was all to do over again.

"Fourth World"

It is being done all over again in this fourth world of mine. Done by the young men and the young women of the United Nations. But done with a difference that, to me, seems all-important. In the Great War the women of the Empire stood nobly behind their men. In this war—have you noticed it?—they are standing beside them. These young women gave up their right to a seat in a crowded street car to win a far greater one; the right to fight for their country and to sit at its council tables.

Make no mistake, if need be, these women will fight beside their menfolk. Not with comics and strip weapons but with gun and plane and even tank. The mechanization of armies has made them almost the equals of men as soldiers. There has never been any question of their courage.

So another war will be won. Home from the front, wherever that may be, will come marching these incredibly brave young men and women. And in all their minds will be a thought something like this: Now there is a peace to be made. It must be such a peace as will ensure that democracy need not be died for once every generation. It must be such a peace as will allow Democracy to be lived for. It must create a world that no sane, social person will want to change and that no insane, anti-social person will be allowed to change.

How will they go about getting such a world? I do not know. But I have a feeling that they will get it. Also, that he will be unwise who tries to thwart them. And again I say that I should like to live another 20 years.

Tech Students Are Working On Model Planes

Completion of some 35 model "Wellington" bombers is now underway at the Edmonton Technical School, and students at the school expect to soon start work on another of the five types of model planes which have been requested by the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The planes used for instructional purposes, for plane identification, measure about 15" in length, and are complete in every detail of outer appearance. Held at a distance of 25 feet, they very closely resemble the appearance of the real planes as seen in the sky.

OBTAIN ASSISTANCE

Assisting in making the planes are regular students at "Tech" and the aircraft repair women students. In all 11 parts are needed for the model planes which are constructed of wood, fitted together, and filleted with beeswax before being painted black and fitted with isinglass, resembling spinning propellers. Similar model planes are being made at other schools at many Canadian points.

For use of students at the school, a Wright Cyclone and a Cheetah 10 engines have been turned over to the school by the R.C.A.F. First is a British type and the second an American type engine.

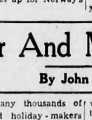
Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

WHEN the many thousands of tourists and holiday-makers who patronize the Jasper Park Lodge of the C.N.R. during the imminent holiday season—and it is expected the total will run into the thousands despite restricted facilities—the music for both concerts and dances will be provided by Cecil Cameron's 10-piece orchestra. This is a reengagement of Mr. Cameron and his musicians, who have provided the music to the satisfaction of all in the last several seasons.



JOHN OLIVER

Mr. Cameron himself will direct. With many bands from various areas seeking the post, it is a tribute to the high standard set and maintained by the Edmonton musicians, that they have been selected again to provide the music at the Jasper Park Lodge.

Concert music will be played for dinner, and later the orchestra will "double" as a dance band. Here-with is the personnel of the orchestra, the first-named instrument after each player's name, being that played in the concert combination, and the others are for dance work: Alexander Nicol, violin, saxophone, clarinet; Roderick Cook, violin, saxophone, clarinet; Pearl Hogue, Vancouver, 'cello, violin, saxophone; George Bryson, double bass; Denzil Skiles, Vancouver, and formerly of Edmonton, clarinet and saxophones; Harold King, Vancouver, trumpet and mellophone; Dan Humble, Fort William, trombone and arranger; Arthur Fleming, piano; Frank McCleary, drums, violin, vibraphone.

It will be noticed that a few of the players are from points other than this city. Mr. Cameron pointed out that it has been necessary to bring in some players this year, in view of several of his former players having joined the armed services since last summer.

Among those who have joined are Edward Kirkwood, violin and saxophone, who organized the band at No. 4 I.T.S. here; John van Deelan, trombonist in that band; Chris. Dewhurst, trumpet, and Ralph Mumford, pianist and accordion ace. Mr. Cameron and his orchestra will open at Jasper on June 15.

This column has received for review, the latest song from that daddy of all "popular" song writers, Irving Berlin. The song, of the ballad type, is entitled, "I Threw a Kiss in the Ocean." It is a song of the melodious, plaintive type, wherein a girl casts a kiss into the ocean and hears an answer from her bluejacket. As is the case with all Irving Berlin's songs, this has a well-delineated melodic line. The compass, while more extended than is usual with a popular song—an octave and a fourth—is not beyond the range of the average vocalist. The melody is sweet and smoothflowing. It is expertly harmonized. another outstanding feature of Mr. Berlin's songs, and the piano arrangement is easy, and playable. The words tell a sweet story. The song should prove popular, and is gaining in popularity. When one hears—as one does on all too distantly-separated occasions—a vocalist such as Evelyn MacGregor sing it, one does not wonder at its sweeping popularity.

Enough Cloth For All Forces Saved By Restrictions

VANCOUVER, June 6.—(CP)—R. F. Chisholm, administrator of wholesale trade of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, told a luncheon meeting here yesterday that restrictions on men's clothing would save enough material to provide a uniform for every man in the Canadian armed services and elimination of little used lines of plumbing manufacturers will release enough steel to produce 250 medium tanks.

"At the moment, we all acknowledge that we are faced with a declining standard of living," he said. "But what we call a lower standard of living may very well be a saner standard of living if we learn to eliminate waste."

C.P.R. Employees Are Playing Leading Part In Canada War Effort

MONTREAL, June 6.—Canadian Pacific employees now serving in the battle lines and on the home front are proving themselves worthy successors of their colleagues who served so valiantly in the first World War.

The extent to which they are "doing their bit" through enlistment in the armed services, in the speeding up of munitions production in the company's shops, the transportation of troops and materials, subscribing to war loans, and in numerous other ways, has made an impressive showing on the company's records, and continues to broaden in scope.

Since the beginning of the war, approximately 5,000 employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway and Express Company have enlisted for active service in the army, navy and air force, while new enlistments are being recorded regularly from all over the system. The present figure includes some 2,700 soldiers, 700 seamen, and 1,200 airmen, the balance serving in various other capacities.

STEAMSHIPS

The figure is equally impressive in the case of Canadian Pacific Steamships whose former luxury liners, now wartime camouflaged, are keeping men and supplies on the move wherever they happen to be assigned. By the end of April there were 4,484 Steamships employees serving on the company's ships under charter of the Admiralty, the majority of whom comprised the ships' crews in peacetime. Another 1,010 are now in service on armed coasters, while 81 more are engaged in shore staff operations.

AIR LINES

The newly-formed Canadian Pacific Air Lines Ltd., are also making a valuable contribution to the war effort, particularly where the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan is concerned. This branch of the service now has under its control six air observers schools, one elementary flying training school, and four repair and overhauling plants, these being located at strategic points across Canada.

An important feature of these schools is that they are operated on a strictly non-profit basis to Canadian Pacific Air Lines, any surpluses or revenue realized being restored to the Crown.

Many employees are already overseas, others are waiting to "go active" from various training centres, while some have been in the thick of various campaigns. A number of the company's personnel have been decorated for valor, several airmen have received the D.F.C., while others have distinguished themselves in other ways.

In addition to Canadian Pacific employees attached to active service units, there are hundreds of others training regularly in reserve units, Officers Training Corps, Civilian Protection Committees, Mobile Police, and certain units calling for regular parades after working hours.

As in the last war, when 11,340 employees answered the call to the colors, the Canadian Pacific has taken steps to assure the protection of employees' pension rights for all employees who leave the company to enlist in the armed forces. This leaves their period of service "unbroken," and credits are made for the duration of their military service.

ON HOME FRONT

Canadian Pacific employees are making an equally splendid showing on the home front. With the company's rail lines handling a vastly increased flow of military and civilian traffic, and its ships turning out tanks, guns and other munitions in evergrowing quantities, employees are sparing no pains to keep the trains and production lines moving at top speed.

Since May, 1941, when the first Canadian Pacific-made tank assembled off the assembly line at Montreal, the production pace has been increased steadily. Many of these speedy "Valentine" tanks have already seen service with the Russian army where they proved particularly successful and drew high praise from their operators.

The same patriotic spirit is being displayed by employees of the company's other large railway shops across Canada where the accent is on wartime production. The part they play in the shops is recently revealed to the public by means of a C.B.C. "Voices of Victory" broadcast where the employees replied to questions and discussed interesting aspects of their duties.

Canadian Pacific employees continue to find new means of expressing their patriotism. One of the most novel was the recently closed Golden Arrowsmith Fund, which employees through the collection and sale of old gold, raised sufficient funds to purchase two fighter planes for the R.C.A.F. and present a substantial cash gift to the Queen's Canadian Fund.

INSPIRING FEATURE

An outstanding production milestone was passed recently at one of the company's shops in western Canada, when employees brought to 100 the number of naval guns to be produced on the shops' premises. The event will be marked by a special ceremony, when the employees will make a personal present of the symbolic weapon to the British Admiralty. The gun, which was built entirely on the employees' own time will be received by C. D. Howe, minister of munitions and supply, and turned over to Admiral Evans of the British Admiralty Technical Mission.

The call for blood donations met with instant response from the company's personnel. In Montreal alone, more than 2,800 employees have already pledged themselves or served as blood donors, while the "transfusion drive" is being spurred on by active committees throughout the system.

VICTORY LOANS

Employees of the company also distinguished themselves in both the recent Victory Loans, in addition to which they have pledged a large percentage of their monthly salaries to the purchase of War Savings stamps and certificates. In the Victory Loan of June, 1941, 8,728 employees purchased bonds to the value of $2,094,650, while in the second campaign nearly four times as many employees subscribed with bond purchases totalling $3,654,100. War Savings Certificates were deducted from employees' pay cheques, during the month of March, to the value of $138,121, with 33,490 employees subscribing.

The Canadian Pacific Women's Services are also making a splendid showing in their first Red Cross work. During the past two years, the Montreal branch knitted no less than 2,518 articles, including sweaters, socks, mitts, scarves and other comforts for the fighting men. A number of fully equipped field ambulances have been donated to the Red Cross by subscription of employees in Canada and the United States.

It is also interesting to note that the number of escaped German prisoners recaptured by Canadian Pacific employees now stands at 13, while employees are rendering valuable assistance to the authorities in various other ways. Several of the captures were effected in lonely sections of the company's right-of-way by constabulary calls to the employee's personal safety.

Another interesting activity on the company's wartime program is the series of booklets published by the company in England under the title of "Canada's Guests." These contain pictures of English refugee children in their new Canadian surroundings with interesting stories on their progress.

The extent to which the employees are putting their shoulder to the wheel in the present conflict is manifest in countless other forms throughout the Canadian Pacific system, and will stand as a proud chapter in the history of the railway and the country it serves.

INSPIRING FEATURE

The contribution made by the Canadian Pacific Steamships to the war cause is one of the most inspiring features of the company's effort. The vital process of moving men and material over treacherous sea lanes has already made proud history in the company's annals, and has resulted in the sacrifice of several of its cargo vessels and great passenger liners, as well as some of their crew.

The casualty list already carries the name of the "Empress of Britain" proud flagship of the company's fleet, in addition to the "Empress of Asia" whose loss in Far Eastern waters was announced recently. The passenger liner "Montrose" went down in active service earlier in the war, while four of the company's five "Beaver" cargo vessels have been sunk by enemy action.

Business Visitor

G. B. Burpee, Winnipeg, inspector of transportation for the C.P.R., who was in Edmonton on business recently.

Calgary Artist Praises Festival

Praise of the folk festivals which have been held in recent years was expressed Saturday by Walter J. Phillips, Calgary artist, during a visit to Edmonton. Mr. Phillips declared that the festivals, together with study of arts and crafts of the various national groups in Canada are serving as a splendid means of bringing greater understanding and unity among the groups.

"The arts," he said, "serve as one of the best of meeting-grounds, since there are no boundaries in the arts, but it is an eclectic field with the best of all national efforts being circulated and forming part of international accomplishment."

Mr. Phillips, who is a recognized Western Canadian artist in water colors and prints, is a regular instructor at the Banff School of Fine Arts. In the art class this summer, he will teach with H. G. Glyde of Calgary, and George Pepper, instructor at the Ontario College of Art. He stated that students, in past years, have enlisted from many parts of Canada and the United States, and that one student from South America attended last year.

TODAY'S MESSAGE

By REVEREND A. L. CARR, B.A.
Lacombe, Alberta
President of the Alberta Conference of the United Church of Canada

"Shut In's" Day

CERTAIN days in the calendar are set aside for special reasons—Birthdays, Mother's Day, Labor Day, Remembrance Day, Thanksgiving Day, Easter Day, Christmas Day, and several others. Not the least important among them is "SHUT INS" Day, which is being internationally observed this year on Sunday, June 7. To all such who cannot mix in the normal social life of others, and walk in God's sunshine and in His beautiful fields, the United Church in Alberta sends out a word of cheer, and, in the spirit of Christian fellowship, clasps the unseen hands of those in our sanatoriums, hospitals, refuge homes, private homes, and wherever one or more may be found alone and helpless.

But no one is alone or of no importance. The All Wise God, who allows suffering, infirmity and affliction to come to His children has a place in His great world for everyone. The rich, the poor, the blind, the maimed, the halt, the deaf, the dumb all make their contribution toward a better world. See how the world's life has been enriched by persons like the blind George Matheson, Fanny Crosby and John Milton, by the deaf Beethoven, the crippled Wilberforce, the paralytic Roosevelt, the Th. Robert Louis Stevenson, the blind, deaf and dumb Helen Keller, and many scores of others of varied affliction. Sunshine in the hearts of Shut Ins may cast its rays of light and beauty far down the broadening ways of future generations.

One, now dead, who was a helpless invalid for 18 years was often visited by the writer. She was never heard to murmur, or complain of her condition. Her thoughts were always on the needs of others. Her face shone with a grace which only comes to those living in constant fellowship with the Master. A visit with her was always a benediction, as well as a rebuke to any complaining and faultfinding spirit. She was one of many ministering angels. She, being dead, yet speaketh.

While good and kind thoughts go out to all Shut Ins today, and gifts of flowers and fruit are made, and letters and cards received, we, who are active in the social and religious life of our day, are conscious of the holy ministrations made to us by your faith, patience and acceptance of God's will.

McCoy Health Service

Acne is the medical name of an inflammatory skin disorder usually called "pimples." It produces the distressing crops of red pimples topped with pus which so often cause the boy or girl in the teen age to feel embarrassment.

Such blemishes commonly appear on the face, but may also be present across the upper back. After the blemishes themselves clear up, unsightly pits or scars may remain. Acne may be present over a period of months or years and is most likely to be found among those having oily skins. Oiliness of the hair is also commonly found. Incorrect cleansing of the excess oil from the skin plays a part in helping to cause further pimples to appear.

The causes of acne are both internal and external, that is, they come from both the inside and the outside. Of the two, the internal causes are the more important. Any of the following causes may operate to produce the disorder: Continued constipation; over-eating on sweets; the use of rich food to excess; lack of sunlight and too little exercise.

Some of the outside factors which aid in prolonging the disorder are the excessive oil thrown out on the skin surface; and also the tendency to squeeze the pimples, which serves to induce further irritation. Lack of proper cleansing of the skin and mis-guided treatment may also intensify the tendency to acne.

There is considerable evidence to believe that in a patient who has followed wrong habits of living, Nature attempts to bring about a general cleansing of the body during the teen age, at a time when important glandular readjustments are taking place, and that acne may be a part of this cleansing process. However, the young person who has followed correct habits of living is able to go through this stage of development without crops of embarrassing pimples. I believe that when they appear, they are a sign that the patient should change his wrong habits of living to better ones.

The three changes which will do the most good are: First, the adoption of those measures which bring about a thorough cleansing of the intestinal tract; second, the use of the fast, followed by a simple, wholesome diet; and third, the correct method of washing the affected areas, supplemented by local treatment when necessary.

The treatment of acne must be both local and constitutional and a number of measures must be used simultaneously to bring about the most rapid results.

Constipation is usually present and must be corrected. The patient may do a great deal to encourage better functioning of the intestine by using a larger amount of green leafy vegetables which provide bulk, and through taking vigorous physical culture exercises. Good intestinal hygiene, when coupled with correct diet and proper skin cleaning, will often be all that is needed to banish acne.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy, St. Los Angeles, Calif.

Bible Society Has Good Record

The British and Foreign Bible Society has a unique record in its large circle of friends. Its sole source of revenue is derived from individual gifts from its friends throughout the British Empire and in the "younger churches" built up by missionaries on the foreign mission fields within and beyond the boundaries of the Empire. These friends believe in the Society and in the world service we are doing.

Another record is the extent to which every church is helped in her mission work. Indeed, the work we are doing is their work. We supply their missionaries at home and abroad, their chaplains, their aged poor, their blind, the inmates in their hospitals, their young men in military service, and countless others with the Scriptures at prices the poor can afford to pay —and in many instances without cost.

Today when much of our missionary work in distant lands is in the hands of native Christians, this world-wide service and interest is more important. Faced with the withdrawal of foreign missionaries, the least we can do is to make certain the supply of Scriptures for native Christian leaders. In this ecumenical ministry we serve every church in the British Commonwealth. Therefore, we cannot be satisfied with our present financial achievements. It remains our obligation to secure from every possible donor the designation of a legacy or a life membership gift, in addition to an annual contribution for this world-wide service.

Its scope is far-reaching—it broadcasts the WORD OF GOD in 760 languages. Its activities can never be superfluous—man will always need the Bible."

In Account With Life

By COURTLANDT W. SAYRES

One night deep in starlight still,
I dreamed that I received this bill:
. . . In account with life:
Five thousand breathless dawns all new;
Five thousand flowers fresh in dew;
Five thousand sunsets wrapped in gold;
One million snowflakes served ice cold;
Five quiet friends; one baby's love;
One white-mad sea with clouds above;
One hundred music-haunted dreams
Of moon-drenched roads and hurrying streams.
Of prophesying winds and trees;
Of silent stars and drowsing bees;
One June night in a fragrant wood;
One heart that loved and understood.
I wondered when I waked at day
How—how in God's name—I could pay.

Perhaps we can pay a little bit for all this glory by being sincerely thankful for the gifts of the Creator.

RE-MODEL — REPAIR AND RE-BUILD

Existing Canadian House Shortage Likely Grow Increasingly Worse

With a serious housing shortage existing right across Canada and threatening to become even worse as war industries continue to expand, the Dominion cannot afford to discontinue its National Housing Act or permit this legislation to become inactive, according to municipal and social welfare authorities. Government housing grants reach only limited areas and do not provide a practical solution to the present emergency, officials state.

Speaking in Montreal recently, Sydney Maslen, secretary of the housing committee of the New York Community Service and chairman of the U.S. National Committee of Housing Associations, declared that the present housing shortage in both the U.S. and Canada is likely to grow worse instead of better unless relieved by large scale housing schemes which can provide permanent homes which will, in peacetime, replace existing slums. Canadian authorities added the comment that if that statement is true of the United States, where vast housing developments are now under way, it is even more true in Canada.

Under the National Housing Act homes have been built by private owners across the country, and there is a need for the building to be continued today. Problems of materials and labor, builders admit, must be considered, but in the case of low cost dwellings those problems are not acute at present. Most restrictions apply to plumbing and heating equipment, but manufacturers and supply houses have recently advertised to the effect that while the range of these products is now limited, there are nevertheless sufficient materials available to meet present and likely needs in the near future. "There are lots of baths, tubs still available," one distributor stated, "although it may be impossible to buy a pink one to match the window curtains."

There is no problem connected with securing wood and such building materials as insulated siding, asphalt shingle roofings and asphalt tile floorings are not required for war production and are not affected by priorities. Finally, while more and more workers are being employed in war industries, there is still no dearth in the number of carpenters available for small house building.

Because of the urgency of the problem, builders point out, it is essential that private building continue in the low cost home field.

Vapor-Proof Paint Checks Blistering

Now that you can see the siding of your house in the clear spring sunshine, perhaps you realize that the winter weather did some damage to the paint there through condensation, which causes blistering, peeling and staining.

The most effective agent against condensation is a vapor barrier in the walls. This barrier is virtually impossible in a house already built, but there are some half measures. Try applying at least two coats of vapor-proof paint on the room side of exterior walls. No paint film is a complete vapor barrier, but paints having a varnish vehicle, such as good enamel, will do some sealing, and thus retard condensation.

Several super-sealing paints are on the market for this kind of protection, most of them having a glossy or semi-glossy finish. There also is a varnish-base enamel which dries with a semi-luster, which is a compromise between gloss and dullness.

Other means of combating condensation are keeping humidity indoors down to 20 per cent when the temperature outdoors is below zero, down to 30 per cent when it is between zero and 20 degrees outdoors, and down to 40 per cent for outside temperature of 20 degrees or above, and providing attic ventilation for escape of water vapor at the top of a heated house.

Small Boys Are Found Following All-Night Search

BASHAW.—A search party was called out recently to hunt for Gerald Wadlow, 11, and his brother Bert, 7, who failed to return home. Mrs. Wadlow, Mirror, mother of the children, became worried when the youngsters failed to return home at dark on Saturday evening and notified the R.C.M.P. at Bashaw, who with several other men searched all night.

Sunday morning the R.C.M.P. called out Boy Scouts and others and continued the hunt and the children finally were found near Lamerton Siding, about two miles from Mirror. The boys had gone for a walk, become tired and gone to sleep.

Mixing Valve Bars Hazards To Shower

How much hot water do you waste when adjusting the temperature of your morning or evening shower? Probably more than you realize, particularly if your water system is such that the shower turns cold or scalding whenever some one else in the house turns on the hot water. But this condition can be corrected easily, if you install a shower mixing valve that automatically mixes cold and hot water to a set temperature.

Mixing valves are available in householders' with priorities for the exposed type and $24 for the concealed type. These prices do not include installation, which is a matter of a few hours of a plumber's time.

The mixing valves not only save water but prevent accidents. Sudden scalding is avoided because the hot water cannot flow if there is no cold-water flow when the valve is turned.

SCHMELING-CARPENTIER PHOTO IS CALLED PHONY PROPAGANDA

BOSTON, June 6—A photograph appeared several days ago showing Max Schmeling shaking hands with Georges Carpentier in occupied Paris. The pale Parisian we sports historians used to refer to as "The Orchid Man" looked young and trim and thin as a sophomore, but the more interesting part of the photograph was the former "Black Uhlan." His haberdashery was immaculate, and expensive of cut.

It may have been a propaganda photograph, purposely dressed to give the impression that all is well in the interior of Germany, but whether faked or real, Der Max seemed dressed in the height of fashion, and the fashion seemed to have considerable height.

The caption said that Schmeling had been moved into Paris to super-vise boxing in that particular area. The role of Carpentier wasn't made very clear, but, presumably, he's stuck in the place, and has to make the best of it. At last reports, he was operating a bar in that general vicinage. The German implication was that he was greeting the former German world champion with open arms. Carpentier might have a different story to tell if he were in this land and freed from the tenta-cles of the German Gestapo.

CARPENTIER NEVER HAD CHANCE WITH DEMPSEY

Both these boxers were pretty swell citizens when they cam-paigned on our shores. What they are in the circumstances that cur-rently surround them may be some-thing entirely else. Carpentier, a French air force ground mechanic in World War No. 1, was imported by Rickard to fight Dempsey at Jer-sey City.

He didn't have a chance, and he apparently knew he didn't have a chance. Yet he went in to do what he could before being knocked into oblivion, and that right hand sock he exploded against the concrete chin of the ruthless Dempsey in the second round of that program at Jersey City rests in fistic history as one of the most sensational blows ever delivered in a world heavy-weight championship contest.

Dempsey rocked and rolled from that punch, but he didn't go down and the contest really ended right there. France's famous Orchid Man had played for that particular punch, had successfully feinted the American champion into the requi-site opening, and had landed it with all the explosive force resident in his celebrated starboard batteries. The bearded and beetle-browed Dempsey had refused to drop and had rolled in for more.

TUNNEY MADE SHORT WORK OF GORGEOUS GEORGES

The battle went along for a couple more stanzas, but the issue was over after that one blow by the beautiful Frenchman. It was obvious that if that Sunday punch couldn't do the business, nothing the Frenchman had could bring the American down.

Carpentier never did a great deal after that. He fought this one and that one, but none of them meant very much. I per-sonally remember perhaps his most spectacular effort thereafter. It was a 15-round loss to Gene Tunney, one hot night in July in New York back in 1924. Gorgeous Georges, who was well washed up by that time, was knocked into a coma by the ratatatat of the Tunneyian fists about half way through this particular soiree, and the last several rounds of that fight were perhaps the most peculiar ever seen in an Ameri-can ring.

Carpentier was literally dead from the waist up. His arms sagged. His body flopped. His guard was down, his eyes glassy, his face and body helpless. Only his massive legs retained their life and kept walking, walking Tunney, with his light-stroller batteries, kept rocking and rolling the upper half of the sleep-walking Frenchman and pleading with the referee to stop it in the name of mercy. But the Frenchman wouldn't fall and the referee wouldn't stop it.

MAN NOT BAD SORT BUT HAD ODD TRAINING SCHEMES

Tunney's face was a study of dis-gust and distaste as he slugged it out to the finish. Everybody who saw that fight knew that Tunney was no finisher and was henceforth nobody to rate with the great names of this grisly profession.

So far as the German. Schmel-ing, goes, most of us in the busi-ness all liked that youngster and felt sorry for him. He was com-ing along in his profession just when Hitler was coming along as the new and fantastic head of his particular fatherland. In those days, we still held to the theory that the law of sportsmanship transcended those of the nation-alistic variety. Schmeling was in something of a jam because he had a Jew, Joe Jacobs, of whom all of us were fond, handling his pugilistic business.

And Schmeling seemed to stick to Jacobs despite the anti-Semitic deterrents in his home country. Furthermore, Schmeling seemed to be right smart of a fist fighter.

He was an odd stick, especially in the matter of his training. Instead of doing road work, for instance, he set two stakes in the ground on the lawn of his cottage and marched back and forth between them for hours. That was that German pre-cision and drudgery. If such were what we were looking at we might have warned the world from even such an innocent-looking perform-ance as that. Schmeling's ring style was strictly a manufactured job, copied from movies of Jack Demp-sey's fights. We might have made something of that, too.

CLAIMS SCHMELING HATES HITLER AND ALL HIS GANG

After war broke over the face of the world, the Nazi propaganda department had him a heroic para-chute trooper participating in the battle of Crete. There he was first reported killed, then reported sick from having eaten some poisoned chocolate the British left when re-treating. Now he is in Paris, looking healthy and beautiful, according to his latest picture.

I know both men, from past hours of intimacy. Both are un-doubtedly playing a role. Schmel-ing has no heart in the Nazi ideol-ogy. He told me many times and in so many words. He hates Hitler, Goebbels and Himmler. Goering, to him, is but a clown. He'd murder Goebbels, given a fair chance, because that poison-ous little club-footed wolf made a serious pass at his wife.

Carpentier hates 'em all even worse. There's a real Tri-Color Frenchman. He'll even murder Schmeling if given the chance. The picture of the two of them smiling as they clasped hands was a terrible thing—to anybody who knew both men. Georges would kill for France and never mark the personal con-sequences. Schmeling is a phony Nazi. His heart is here. They shook hands for a propaganda photograph, but neither was kidding the other.

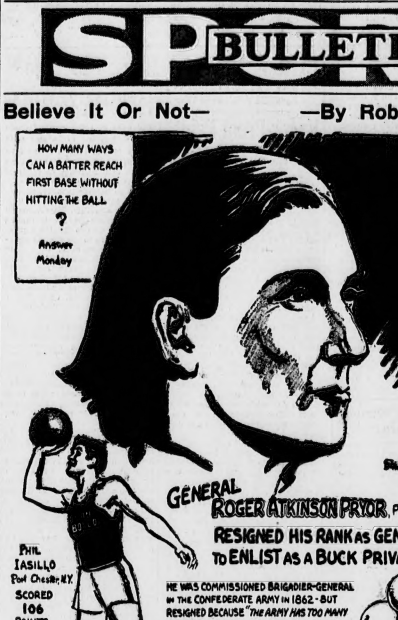
Believe It Or Not— —By Robt Ripley



EXPLANATION OF TODAY'S CARTOON

I'D RATHER BE A PRIVATE THAN A GENERAL: Roger Atkinson Pryor (1828-1919) of Petersburg, Va., is the only general in American history who resigned his rank to fight as a buck private. On April 16, 1862, he was appointed a brigadier-gen-eral in the Confederate army by General Joseph E. Johnston. Pryor wrote to Gen-eral Lee saying that inasmuch as the Confederate army has too many generals as it is, while its real need is more private soldiers, he was resigning his rank and joining Fitz-hugh Lee's cavalry as a private. Here he fought valiantly, discharging all the duties of a buck private until captured by the North. When Lincoln learned of his capture, he or-dered the private general freed and returned to the Confederacy. After the war, Pryor came to New York and became a famous lawyer and supreme court justice of the state of New York. He served in both the Confederate and U. S. Congress.

Lawyer Must Wait Until After War

CHICAGO, June 6. — (AP) — Judge John Prystalski ruled Fri-day that Cpl. Joe Louis Barrow world champion heavyweight boxer now stationed at Camp Up-ton, N.Y., need not defend an at-torney's suit for $10,500 fees until after the war.

The ruling was based upon a re-cently enacted federal law provid-ing relief from legal controversies for men in the armed forces. At-torney Bindley Cyrus brought the suit to collect payment for hand-ling a divorce action against Bar-row by his wife, Mrs. Marva Trot-ter Barrow a year ago. The suit was dropped after the couple was reconciled.

"Rubber-Match" At Belmont

Alsab Clashes With Shut Out Today

NEW YORK, June 6—(AP)—For the benefit of the army and the navy—as well as for a winner's pay cheque of more than $40,000—Alsab and Shut Out tear up Belmont today in their widely-touted "Rub-ber match."

They're the big guys in a field of eight entered for the 74th running of the Belmont Stakes, the last "jewel" nailed annually in the triple crown for the American turf's three-year-olds. Supporting it this year are the National Stallion Stakes for juveniles and the Carter Handicap for older gallopers on a war relief program which figures to net the war effort some $100,000.

Shut Out, son of Equipoise and "spittin' image" of his daddy, came out of Mrs. Payne Whitney's barn to win the Kentucky Derby this spring, with Alsab second. A week later, Al Sabala's Chicago champ pranced home in the Preakness and Shut Out wound up back in the pack. Wayne (The Cowboy) Wright piloted Shut Out in each of these outings. This time, Eddie Arcaro will be doing the steering.

Today's mile-and-a-half get-together will just about decide the championship of the three-year-olds, especially since Sun Again, Devil Diver and Requested are laid up with leg injuries and the others are strictly nothing to start naming streets after.

If Alsab clicks this time—and he's a 3-5 betting choice—he'll win $42,400, for Shut Out or any of the others, it will be $44,670, because the "Sab" was a supplementary nom-inee at $2,300. With $197,585 al-ready in the bank for his years and a half of racing, victory for the $700 bargain baby would boost him well up among the top 20 money winners of all time.

Belmont expects a crowd of 40,-000 and are looking for a mutuel handle within shouting distance of $2,000,000, possibly even coming close to last Saturday's $2,176,071, which shattered all national one-day betting records.

The track's entire income from the proceedings, minus only purses to horsemen, has been pledged to army and navy relief and the united services organization.

Lindsay To Get Crack At Title

VANCOUVER, June 6—(CP)—Bantamweight Champion Lou Sal-ica's world title will go on the block in a rematch with Vancouver's Kenny Lindsay here July 4.

Promoter Jack Price announced Friday he had signed up the Cali-fornia fighter for a 15-round title bout.

Lindsay dropped a decision to Salica in a non-title fight here last Wednesday.

Price said his contract included a title defence not more than 45 days after July 4 if Lindsay takes the crown.

Erickson Belongs In Brooklyn, Says Jockey Durocher

BROOKLYN, June 6 — Paul Erickson, Chicago Cub right-hand-er, apparently belongs with the Dodgers. He started something in a game at Ebbets Field when he called to the Brooklyn bench:

"That wall til I pitch against you guys next time."

"Gwan," retorted the ever-quick pilot of the Bums, Leo Durocher, "you have an arm of iron and a head of cement.

"Know what that guy did last year," said the Lip. "After pitching practice, he walked into some joint across the street from the Cubs' park and had a sandwich and a glass of beer—still in uniform.

"And they say the Dodgers do crazy things."

Final Set For June 28

Play For City Golf Title Starts At Mayfair, June 20

Qualifying round of the annual city golf championship will start at Mayfair Golf and Country Club on Saturday, June 20, with the first and second rounds the following day.

The third round will be played during the next week, with the semi-final set for Saturday, June 27, and the final on Sunday, June 28.

All entries are supposed to be in the hands of the committee by Thursday, June 18, as the draw is being made that night.

According to W. A. (Bill) White, secretary of the City Golf As-sociation, the prospects are fairly good for a much better entry than last year when only 41 competed.

A total of at least 64 is hoped for, as the play practically monopolizes the facilities of the club when the event is run off, for at least a week and unless the entry comes up to expectations this year, a change in the type of the tournament will be necessary another season.

Henry Martell, of the Highlands Club, perennial winner of the cham-pionship, intends to enter again this year in order to keep intact his unbeaten record of seven, and other prominent golfers have already sig-nified their intention of competing.

Entry sheets will be available at all of the clubs during the coming week.

President of the City Golf As-sociation is Dr. W. C. Broadfoot, while Jack Marshall is vice-presi-dent.

Canadians Win 11-0 Against Cubs

Marking a milestone in Edmonton Junior Baseball League history, Doug. Darrah, pitching ace for the Cana-dians, hurled a no-hitter against the Cubs at Renfrew Park on Friday night. The Canucks won 11-0.

With the exception of the first inning, Darrah retired the opposition in order, but he was backed up by great fielding of his team-mates who contributed two fast double plays. The young Viking speedster struck out 13.

Elmer Thomas, who looked after-affaires de chuck for the Cubs also furnished one for the book when he struck out four Canadians in the third inning and believe it or not, two of the whiffees scored runs in that eventful session.

Thomas, whose home is at Port Saskatchewan, deserved a much better fate than the score would in-dicate, for aside from the fact that he was a little inclined to be wild, he did a good job and he struck out 11.

The Cub southpaw has plenty of speed and is hard to hold and sev-eral passed balls in addition to er-rors didn't help any. Two earned runs were scored off him.

Ernie Bracke, the starting catcher, went out of the game with an in-jured hand and was succeeded by Brandt, who tried to work with the only mit which was available, al-though it was for the wrong hand.

LEFTY TO LEFTY

It was also something new for Renfrew Park fans to see a battery composed of two lefties—for Brandt happens to be a portside pitcher.

Aside from the initial inning Dar-rah never was in any difficulty. Len Fisher, first-man up, drew one of four walks issued and Guy (Jiggs) Hivon advanced him to second with a perfect sacrifice.

Masikewich was safe on an error, sending Maher to third. Ira Shantz struck out, but Darrah walked Andy Kowalchuk, filling the bases. That was the closest the Cubs ever got to scoring, for Caine also went out on strikes.

In the fourth and sixth innings the Canadians worked in double killings, in each case the play being Des. O'Connor to Bill Montemurro to Jim Fleming.

O'CONNOR HELPS OUT

Nearest thing to a hit made off Darrah was Thomas' pop fly over second in the fifth, which Des. O'Connor let slip through his hands after a hard run.

Canadians got one run in the first on a walk, a wild pitch, a stolen base and a passed ball, but they chased six across in the fourth on hits by Darrah, Fleming, Sapp and Blasius, along with two errors, several passed balls and a wild pitch.

Two batters got to first when the third strike was "Mickey Owened."

Another pair of runs came in the fourth and a trio in the seventh.

Phil Cavarretta's Batting Halts Dodgers At Chicago

CHICAGO, June 6.—(AP)—Phil Cavarretta of the Chicago Cubs called a sudden halt to the current winning streak of the Brooklyn Dodgers in the National league yesterday as two Chicago pitchers—Fleming and Bithorn—held Durocher's men to five hits.

Phil drove in the tying and winning runs. The game was the second of a double bill and the score was 4-3. The Brooks took the first game 6-5.

Whitlow Wyatt helped win the first game, scattering eight hits in eight innings and hammering out a two-run double in the sixth for the Dodgers' fourth in a row. Fireman Hugh Casey had to relieve Wyatt in the eighth, however, under club pressure.

Cavarretta's first potent bat work was in the sixth when his long fly sent in Stan Hack with the tying counter. Then he doubled home the winner in the 10th.

KOSLO HOLDS CARDINALS

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—(AP)—Aided by the four-hit pitching of Dave Koslo, New York Giants Friday night blanked the St. Louis Cardinals 4-0.

While Koslo was handcuffing the Cardinal batters, Harry Danning and Mickey Witek each pulled doubles to give the Giants a one-run lead in the second.

Johnny Mize smashed his sixth home run of the season in the sixth and Koslo made it extra good by counting another tally as the result of a single, passed ball, error and a fielder's choice.

PIRATES FINALLY WIN

PITTSBURGH, June 6.—(AP)—Pittsburgh Pirates finally broke their seven-game losing streak Friday, beating Philadelphia Phillies 6-5 but having to come from behind twice to do so.

Rookie Johnny Barrett's single with the bases loaded high-lighted the Pirates' winning four-run rally in the seventh.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—New York Yankees added another full game to their American League lead Friday, winning the second-game Cleveland Indians 6-3 in the opener of a five-game series and stretching the margin to a league.

In coupling their 24th success in their last 28 games, the Yankees landed on Lefty Al Smith for three runs in the first inning and routed him in the third when they sewed up the game six two more.

The game was a pitching battle between Dick Fowler of the A's and Johnny Niggeling and George Caster for the Browns.

Fowler pitched the entire distance, giving up only nine hits. Niggeling retired after 12 innings and Caster twirled the remaining four frames. The two yielded 10 hits in one of the longest night games in the major leagues.

Relief pitcher Mace Brown put out the fire after starting pitcher Jack Terry got two away in the ninth. Then walked Sam West and permitted Mike Tresh to single. Brown came in and forced pinch-hitter George Dickey to roll to Bobby Doerr for the final out.

CANADIAN SPORTSHOTS

TORONTO, June 6—(CP)—One of the better football stories is one about a large young fellow picked up for Ottawa by grid-enthusiast Eddie Emerson.

Bill Ottawa Journal) Weatwick writes that all this big fellow wanted as retainer was three meals a day.

Emerson turned up at the club's first workout to watch his protege perform, and found him a corner of the field with a machine and a pile of golf balls, thoughtfully chipping them into a nearby canal. This struck Emerson as a refreshing approach to the game so he sauntered over and lobbed a few balls into the canal himself.

Finally Emerson thought to ask where the balls came from. The lad pointed to Emerson's car, explained genially: "They were in a bag along with your clubs."

Sports . . . . Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—With Jimmy Foxx gone, Joe Cronin figures on himself as the Red Sox regular first baseman. He has started seven games so far at third base, short and first and the Sox have won five of them. . . . But old Double X claims that the clubs best first sacker is Paul Campbell, who gave up trying to get Jimmy's job and shifted to the outfield.

THE WHOLE TRUTH

When Harold Lesher, a certified public accountant of Upper Darby, Pa., kept score for some golfing friends, he attested the card this way: "This score was kept by me and with the exception of a little cheating on the tees, the fairways, in the rough and sand traps and on the greens, it is correct."

Fifth Column In France Ready For Allied Invasion

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)— An authority with the best of information on conditions in France declared yesterday that "the damndest fifth column you ever saw" would spring into action against the Germans if a second front were established in France.

He added the bulk of the French fleet was at Toulon in south-eastern France, under orders to yield to no one, Axis or Allied.

The people of both occupied and unoccupied France, this authority declared, would begin immediately to increase sabotage and to snipe at their German oppressors once the United nations established a foothold in France with a reasonable certainty of keeping it.

EYE STRAIN
By J. E. THOMAS, Optometrist

The eye has to focus on any object it looks at. There is a lens in the eye that is flexible. Around that lens is a little muscle which works quite automatically, flattening the lens so that it can look at distant objects, and bulging it out so that it can look at nearby objects. As we grow older that muscle loses its power. Old people in particular have a hard time reading fine print because that muscle does not do its work. But just as old people have subnormal powers of accommodation young children have super normal powers of accommodation. Thus by working that little muscle overtime, they are able to see very well with defective eyes.

Thus severe eye strain goes undetected. Why? Because the children see all right. They can see the blackboard from the back of the room. They can read the finest print. But they are straining their eyes. This strain exacts a heavy toll. It makes school work hard instead of pleasant and easy.

Now there is one curious fact about eye strain which the public has never seemed to learn, and that is, small errors of refraction in the eye cause greater strain than large errors. Where the error is very great, the eyes do nothing to overcome it. Therefore they simply do not strain. They just don't see. But where the error is slight, the eyes can see by straining, and therefore they strain overtime.

Eye strain so often causes headaches, nervousness and depression. So it is easy to see how headaches, nervousness and depression makes people cross and irritable.

If you or any of your family show the least symptoms of eye strain, we would advise you to have their eyes examined immediately, for remember that small errors of refraction, if properly corrected now, may prevent serious eye trouble later on.

Air Officer Announces Pressing, Urgent Need Intensified Recruiting

By JACK DeLONG

Shattering blasts of bombs exploding at Dutch Harbor Wednesday morning had a quick reaction in Edmonton among potential young crusaders of the skies, resulting in a new record for recent weeks in applications for enlistment at R.C.A.F. recruiting headquarters.

On Wednesday Japanese aircraft made history by attacking North America from the skies for the first time. The announcement of the attack was made late in the afternoon. On that day only 19 men were interviewed at No. 3 R.C.A.F. recruiting centre. But on Thursday there were 33 aroused young men seeking information concerning enlistment in the air force, officers at No. 3 recruiting centre stated.

That Dutch Harbor has had a profound effect is evidenced in the records of applications.

From Monday to Friday of the present week, inclusive, there were 107 interviews with prospective recruits. For the corresponding period of the previous week only 66 young men were interviewed.

For the week, from Friday to Friday there were 118 enlistments, with 78 from the country and 40 city dwellers making up the total. Of the total there are 61 air crewmen, such as student pilots, observers, air navigators, air bombers and wireless operator, air gunners.

Horse Winner In Joust With Auto Vehicle

An auto came out second best in a bout with a horse and wagon on 111 avenue near 95 street at 7:30 a.m. Saturday.

As a car driven by George Wells, 11207 93 street, was passing a horse-driven wagon operated by Steve Kenoski of North Edmonton, the horse bolted and lunged into the side of the car.

The weight of the animal together with the shaft and front end of the wagon caused about $50 worth of damage to the whole right side of the auto. Both horse and wagon escaped unscathed.

Regular meeting of the Edmonton Retail Grocers' Association will be held Monday at 8 p.m. at 511 Agency building. President G. C. Proctor will be in the chair.

Women's Units Urged To Aid Army Tag Day

The special committee appointed by the city council, at a meeting held Friday afternoon at the civic block, reaffirmed its decision that the Canadian Army Women's Auxiliaries should cooperate in the holding of one tag day to raise funds for comforts for soldiers overseas.

The committee suggested that the auxiliaries seek the co-operation of a committee of business men to help them in making the tag day a success. This decision was reached after careful consideration had been given to a request from the Auxiliaries for four tag days.

It was suggested also that funds collected from the tag day be distributed between the different units on a basis of personnel strength at the date of the canvas.

APPEAL DECISION

The Auxiliaries will appeal against the decision of tag day committee, and it is expected the council will deal with the matter at its next regular meeting on Tuesday evening.

The committee acceded to the request of the Edmonton Firefighters' Union for permission to hold a tag day in aid of British Fire Fighters, and allotted Saturday, July 11, as the date.

Getting Around
with
Jack DeLong

Although it may have a serious side, there's something laughable about the ruckus reported to have been raised in Ottawa the other day over differences between the scales of wages paid Canadian and American civilians working on the Alaska Highway.

The exact nature of the trouble, or how it started, isn't made very clear in the Ottawa reports, but it is said to hinge on the "high-price and high-wage U.S. economy and the lower scale of the Yukon frontier."

It seems that Canadian workers are being paid a basic 75 cents an hour with cost of living bonus added, while American labor gets 90¢ cents an hour, plus 10 per cent premium on the Canadian dollars they are paid in.

And on top of that our "royally"

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

With increased oil production a vital factor in the United Nations' war effort, the Inquiring Reporter sought opinions on whether or not the Dominion and provincial governments should assist in oil development.

THE ANSWERS

HARRY STEVENS, returned soldier: It is inexplicable that the governments have not taken an active part in the development of oil fields. Some assistance has been given through geological surveys, but when it comes to putting up the real hard cash for development of land surveyed it is left to private capital. When oil is of such vital importance to the war effort there should be nothing haphazard about operations to find it.

PERCY HAWKINS, plumber: There are many areas in Alberta where oil has been found, but little or nothing is being done to develop them. Surely with oil a major war weapon steps should be taken by the government to capitalize on these known resources. It is remarkable that so little drilling is going on in the Wainwright field where a good grade oil has been found in relatively shallow wells.

THOMAS SINCLAIR, store clerk: I suppose the governments cannot take the gamble with public money which is entailed in the drilling of oil wells. The day may come when the oil in Alberta's oil fields will be one of the determining factors in the war. I believe the government should give assistance to private enterprise to develop the known oil resources of the Dominion.

U. Of A. Feeders' Day

Under auspices of the University department of extension, and staged by the department of animal husbandry, the annual Feeders' Day is being held Saturday at the University. Demonstrations in feeding are being given for farmers who are attending from the districts neighboring Edmonton.

Plans For All-Out Role In Victory Drive To Be Formed At Mass Meeting

Employees of the City of Edmonton are anxious to play a larger part in Canada's war effort, and with this purpose in view, have asked Mayor John W. Fry to call a mass meeting of civic employees, to be held at the Memorial Hall on Thursday, June 11, at 8 p.m. Notices of the meeting have been sent by the city commissioners to all civic departments.

It is pointed out that civic employees have already made substantial contributions to the war effort. Generous cash grants have been made to all approved war charities through the Civic Employees' Community Chest; members of the civic staff are serving with the reserve army, as air raid wardens, Veteran Volunteer Reserve units, and more than 120 have enlisted in the active service forces.

Contributions to war charities amount to $24,381; purchase of war savings certificates by civic employees up to May 31 totalled $84,470, and of Victory bonds to the same date $110,000.

The employees through committees and individually have expressed themselves as anxious to play an even fuller part in any plan which will make effective a total war effort. They feel that the best brains of the civic service will, if given the opportunity, contribute in promoting any legitimate project with this end in view.

"Labor is prepared, as always, to shoulder its full responsibility, but has repeatedly urged that it should be taken into partnership on any problem confronting the nation," states John Pollock, convener of the committee in charge of arrangements for the mass meeting.

Members of the committee are:

Spoiled Children Pay For Home Folly

Woman Is Praised For Determination To Raise Hers On Rational Basis; Child's Character Is Set in Early Years

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband and I are both 25 and get along well together. We have a modest home and a fair income, but we have no children, although we have always hoped we would sometime. Here is my problem:

I have a very close girl friend who says that I should never have a child, feeling as I do about children. Now, I love children and nobody would please me more than to have one of my own, but I believe they have a definite place in the home and should not monopolize it. I don't think it is right or fair to a child to drag it with you everywhere you go, sometimes keeping it up until midnight. Most mothers work hard enough during the day without having the children around their skirts the whole evening. I believe that a child should have regular meal times and sleeping hours, that it should be taught to obey and to have good manners and not to make itself a pest and a nuisance.

Dorothy Dix

Am I an exception to the regular run of mothers when I say that it makes me nervous for a child to be constantly under my feet when I am working, breaking in continually on a grown-up conversation, and to have to scream my head off to get it to pay me the slightest attention? If this is the case, then I feel maybe I shouldn't have children.

Are my ideas old-maidish, should children be allowed to wreck your house, nerves and your friendships because they are so sensitive they can't stand to be reprimanded?

I.M. WONDERING.

Answer: From your letter I should say that you are just the sort of woman who should have children, because if you would stick to your theories in rearing them you would bring up youngsters who would make fine, upstanding men and women, instead of another crop of hoodlum boys and girls.

CHARACTER SET EARLY

It is the weak, spineless mothers who haven't the courage nor the backbone to fight it out with self-willed youngsters who are responsible for the brutish children whom everyone fears and dreads and who are about as welcome in one house as a band of bandits would be. Their mothers think that they are showing what good mothers they are and how tender and loving when they spoil them rotten and let them ride roughshod over them, but if they were their children's worst enemies they could do them no greater wrong.

For a child's character is set, as psychologists tell us, by the time it is three years old, and if by that time it has not been taught obedience, respect for authority and discipline, it never acquires them until life teaches them with a heavy hand. And often the poor weakling that mother has made is crushed by the blows that life deals it.

These women consider themselves good mothers because they indulge their children in their every whim. They never correct them. They never punish them for dong wrong. They let them grow up without guidance at the age when they need guidance at every step. But, in reality, these mothers are criminals because they wreck the lives of the children who were entrusted to their care.

You see the result of their work on every hand. Sickly little children whose stomachs have been ruined by living on lollipops instead of the proper food. Nervous little wrecks who have never had a regular bedtime, but have been dragged around wherever their mothers went and kept up half the night. Destructive children who broke your windows and smeared bananas all over your car when you took them riding. Mothers and children who screamed at each other because neither had any self-control. And you didn't need to be any prophet to tell how these children would turn out, and what a price they would have to pay for their mother's folly.

So it is cheering to hear of one woman who is going to bring up her children, if she has any, on a rational platform. And don't be afraid it won't work, for happily there ARE mothers who teach their children manners and morals, obedience and respect for other people's property. These children will inherit the earth when petted darlings are on the scrap heap.

DOROTHY DIX

UNGRATEFUL DAUGHTER

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Why do so many girls, when they reach the age of 20 or 21, seem to have a revulsion toward their homes, their families and even the communities in which they live? Here is a case in point:

I have some friends who have a daughter whom they sent to a private school. She had seven years of music lessons and then went to college while the father never had more than one suit and one pair of shoes at a time, and the mother was equally shabby, but they always managed somehow to give the girl the clothes she wanted. This girl's room-mate at college is from the moneyed class and she and the girl have a crush on each other.

Recently the girl's mother received a letter from the girl telling her what a bad mother she has been in not giving her daughter more spending money and fine clothes, and so on and so on. The daughter now believes her parents are all fault and, though she is and will be dependent on them for at least two years, she seldom writes and does not come home unless the room-mate comes too.

The girl is leaving college soon to go in training to be a nurse. Do you think she will get over this estrangement and come to appreciate the sacrifices her parents made for her? How should the parents act toward such a disloyal daughter?

A FRIEND.

Answer: I have always heard that when parents make these sacrifices to give their children a better education than they had and advantages that they never enjoyed, they do one of the most heroic things in the world. For with their own blindness they dig a chasm that separates them far more than death would. For with their love they should forget their dead child and the Other World and still have it belong to them, but into the New World which they have built after their live children they cannot go because they are not wanted.

Almost invariably the children are ashamed of them, of their lack of culture, of their homely ways, of the way they dress and act, of their beliefs and opinions, and they want to get as far from them as is possible. They have no appreciation of the love that made the old father wear patched and out-of-style clothes that they might splurge in fashion finery. They are no beauty in mother's knotted old hands that grew hard and stiff toiling to keep them in swanky schools.

TOO YOUNG

They are too young, too callow, too ignorant to sense how fine the old people are and to be proud of having such a father and mother. A millionaire might love to sit at Mother's table and eat some of her home cooking. A cavern might listen with delight to Father's homely wisdom. But not they. They would only see that there was just corned beef and cabbage for dinner and that Father's grammar was faulty.

There is no help for the situation. The parents have opened the door and the young bird has flown. Nothing will bring it back. Nothing will make the ungrateful girl. Nothing will put love in the heart of the selfish. Therefore parents' only consolation is hoping that somehow they have given the child they loved better than they did themselves a better chance in life than they had. DOROTHY DIX.

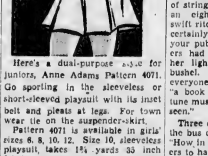
Anne Hathaway probably never lived in



ANNE HATHAWAY'S COTTAGE

Mr. Halliwell-Phillipps, the noted authority on Shakespeare and his times, states that the cottage usually called "Anne Hathaway's Cottage" probably never housed this woman, who at the age of 27 married William Shakespeare, 18. Charles C. Bombaugh, the historian, recently wrote that signs pointing to the cottage should be changed to read: "To the reputed cottage of Anne Hathaway." He further added: "Anne Hathaway's cottage will lose half its attraction if the miserable carping spirit of a regard for historic accuracy comes in."

Angela Peters Goes To Town

By Nellie McClung

MRS. ANGELA PETERS, master mind of the Laburnum district, entered the bus in the early morning at the corner of Lakeside, and hung a globe of brilliant flowers on the corner of the baggage rack, which substantially changed the whole atmosphere of that respectable vehicle. And, indeed it could do with a bit of brightening, since its brilliant coloring (it had been covered up as a war measure, a dull grey) globe of flowers seemed to be held together by invisible wires, and attracted much attention, with its bluebells, delphiniums, frilled petunias, corn flowers, with a patch of bright sunshine made of yellow doronicums; the whole arrangement encircled with an aura of coral bells and baby's breath.

Nellie McClung

BIT OF BEAUTY

The creator of this bit of beauty had deliberately settled herself in the middle of the bus to give her experiment in flowers a chance to be seen. After all, if you sit up late making a string bag with a polished broom handle to hold the strands of string which you lay down over an eight-quart pail, performing swift rites with a crochet hook, you certainly are interested to see how your public responds. Angela Peters had never believed in hiding her light, or any light, under a bushel. "What I find out, I want everyone to know," she often said; "a book is nothing if not read, a tune must be heard, a lovely picture seen."

Three of the women occupants of the bus came over at the first stop. "How in the world do you get flowers to look like that?" one of them asked. Angela's pleasant round face beamed on them. Her string bag worked! Then she demonstrated.

It was a good start for the day, and Angela enjoyed every moment of the ride and walk. She went at once to the Chinese Medical Relief office and presented her flowers to the delightfully enthusiastic secretary. Then she produced from her zipper bag a bunch of asparagus, some slices of cold chicken, a pickled pear and two cakes, arranged on a big rhubarb leaf. "Here's your lunch for today, Miss Marks," she said.

"How did you know I was hungry for asparagus?" Miss Marks asked, "and how do you know that I cook my own lunch there?"

SOMETHING TO GIVE

"I saw you buying an electric plate one day," replied Angela, "and the rest of it was just woman's intuition. I am looking for living in the country is that it's easy to have something to give, even if it's only a bunch of flowers or a few new potatoes. . . . No thank you, I won't come back today to eat with you, I'll find a place for another day; today I'm going to eat in a regular dining-room with a waitress in a cap and apron and a man standing behind my chair, and I'm going right through the best lunch they have on the menu, getting in early to have a window table. I'll pick up some person to eat with me. That's all part of the fun of coming to the town. I like something new each time. When a woman lives alone there is a great danger of her life falling into a set pattern. Haven't you seen women with that awful house-bound look?"

Just then a customer came in and asked to examine the flowers in the window. Miss Marks handed her Angela's beautifully arranged bouquet, which she exclaimed in delight, "I will take them all."

"There are 10 bouquets in that bouquet," Angela said, "worth 25 cents each."

"I would like the bag too," said the customer, "for it is really the arrangement that I admire."

REMEMBER THE SHADINGS

Angela hesitated. She would need the bag to carry parcels. "The bag is not for sale," she said, "but Miss Marks will have bags like this next week. But you can make the same arrangement in your own container. Remember the shadings and to put the light flowers together at one side."

When Miss Marks put the money in her cash box, she said gratefully, "this will keep two Chinese children fed and clothed for a week if you've given me a good start for the day. I will be delighted to have more of these bags for our sale next week."

Angela finished her shopping in the morning, checking off the items on a pink slip, and at 11:45, with her zipper bag and the string bag full of parcels, sat down at one of the writing desks to think about her. This was a good place to choose her luncheon guest. Here were many interesting women, young, old, all ages, some busy ones like herself, some with a sad look on their faces which indicated that they were here to fill in time. This moment, Angela said, smiling to herself, is for a friend with destiny.

Just then a young woman, tall, slight, and wearing a cape, came through the swinging doors between the rows of desks. Angela's first impulse was to give her the seat she occupied, but she was rising to do this anyway, something happened. The young woman tripped over Angela's string bag full of parcels, which were not lying in all directions down the aisle; worse than that, she stumbled painfully against one of the desks. It was all done in a moment, and Angela saw with dismay that the young woman had fallen with her head on the floor, and she distinctly heard that she was not hurt. "I am hell-handed," Angela said humbly, "and I often leave my bags in the wrong place, and I do feel very guilty." The young woman actually smiled at her, and said, "it is quite my own fault; I'm so tall it's hard for me to see where my feet are going."

"That's exactly what a well-bred Englishwoman would say," exclaimed Angela, with admiration.

"Did you say, well-bred English-woman? If so, I thank you for these kind words, for my country-women. You are a Canadian I suppose?"

"Yes, I am," answered Angela, "and just now, an awkward and ashamed Canadian. Will you show your forgiveness by accepting my invitation to lunch with me upstairs?"

SPIRITS ROSE

At the table overlooking the harbor, color came back into the Englishwoman's face, and Angela's spirits rose as she saw her new-found friend ordering the chicken salad and green peas and new potatoes. They knew each other's names now, and Angela was beginning to recover from the disgrace of having created a hazard in a public place.

"That's the best food I've eaten since I came to Canada," said Miss Black, "or indeed since the war started, and I do thank you. I wasn't looking for a pleasant surprise this morning, and I'm afraid I have seemed a bit ungrateful to you."

Angela noticed then that her eyes were stormy and her voice was bitter and hard.

"I wish you'd come home with me and stay a week," said Angela impulsively. "I live 15 miles out of the city in a pretty little village near the sea. I live all alone with a cat and a dog, and I can make you comfortable. The mountain of my little house is all in one room with windows at each end, and it has a lovely view of the sea and the mountains, and there's a path running down to the beach and a comfortable seat there in a cove where the rocks are warm. I believe a rest would do you good."

The two women sat looking at each other. "Why would you do this for me, a stranger?" asked Miss Black. "You do not know one thing about me."

"I've always wanted to do something for the British women who are so steadfast and brave—something more than just praising them."

Miss Black passed her hand swiftly before her face as if to shut out a horrible memory. "I'll go with you," she said, "and be grateful for a week of peace under your kind roof. I shouldn't do it, but I will; but I warn you—I'm not what you think I am. I'm going under false pretences."

GREAT ADVENTURE

Angela looked at her and smiled reassuringly, "you don't know anything about me either, but if you're willing to take the risk, I am too. That's what makes life the great adventure that it is. We never know what's around the corner. Would you like to go to a picture show? I love to see how other people solve their problems. Then we'll go, and we'll be out in time for the 5 o'clock bus." (This will give her time to cool off if this is just a simple family row, thought Angela.)

And so began another one of Angela Peter's adventures in kindly meddling.

War Provides Moratorium On Diets

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

This is the last of six articles on special wartime menu problems.

Every day more women stream into the heavy-industry plants. They are doing not just insignificant jobs, but many of the really hard jobs, too.

Every day's menu must include plenty of vegetables, fruits and milks; a satisfying amount of fish or cheese; eggs used often; and plenty of unrefined foods like whole wheat and brown bread, oatmeal, corn bread.

Women who work mustn't be afraid to eat sweets and starches and fats. Those foods supply needed energy. Women in industry mustn't be afraid of adding a few ounces of weight. They need such a reserve.

Some sweets and starches, of course, are better than others because they have the added protective qualities of minerals and vitamins. Molasses is such a one, the second richest source of iron which the body needs, second only to liver. Whole wheat is another—it is one of the very rich sources of vitamin B-1.

RICH CORN MUFFINS

Sift together a quarter of a cup of sugar, 2 eggs, 1 cup milk, ½ cup butter, melted, 1 2-3 cups sifted flour, 2-3 cup corn meal, 1 teaspoon salt, 2½ teaspoons baking powder.

Mix sugar, beaten eggs, milk, and melted butter together. Sift flour, corn meal, salt and baking powder. Add liquids, stirring only enough to mix. Fill greased muffin tins 2-3 full and bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 25 minutes.

Sitting North in today's hand, Dr. Ecker certainly had to take his life in his hands to make the contract. The opening lead was won in dummy with the ace of spades. Ecker began to cash his diamonds, but discovered at once that West held a stopper. How could the contract be made? Even if the clubs were solid, dummy would have two losers. Obviously West should have to trust to the queen of clubs to drop in two leads. He boldly cashed the third top diamond, discarding the seven of spades. Then he led a heart and finessed the queen. Had the finesse lost, the defenders could have picked up the queen of spades and cashed their whole suit, besides the diamond jack. But happily the finesse won, the club queen dropped, and dummy's last remaining card was the queen of spades on the thirteenth trick.

War Price Board Places Ceiling On Sales Of Sawdust

VANCOUVER, June 6—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board yesterday clamped a ceiling on wholesale and retail sawdust fuel prices which promised a saving for consumers who purchase their supplies this summer but left them still in doubt regarding the availability of fuel next winter.

Because of expected difficulties in transportation government officials have been urging citizens to lay in their fuel supplies early and the price ceiling established yesterday for Vancouver and Victoria set summer prices from 50 cents to $1 per unit under the $5 winter price for first-grade fir sawdust and $4 for mixed sawdust. Until now prices had been frozen generally at $5 a unit.

Japs Claim China Air Base Captured

By The Canadian Press

In the Battle of China, Japanese front-line dispatches asserted today that Japanese troops had captured an important air base near the ancient walled city of Chuhsien and were heavily attacking 40,000 Chinese defenders on the outskirts of the city itself.

Chuhsien is a key rail point in western Chekiang province, on China's east coast.

Domei dispatches said the Japanese had captured two other towns on the rail line between Chuhsien and Nanchang, 300 miles to the west.

Imperial Tokyo headquarters claimed that four Allied submarines had been sunk in Japanese waters in the last few weeks, one of them in Tokyo Bay.

British Ship Sunk

William Hemmant, 39, of London, a British army lieutenant, was arrested and charged with murder.

Germans Suffer Losses In Rear

MOSCOW, June 6.—(AP)—Germany's central front army has lost several hundred infantrymen, killed or wounded, and eight tanks in a furious assault upon Red army forces operating in their rear, the Soviet information bureau said today.

The action was one of a series developing recently in the area west of Moscow.

Soviet airmen were credited with knocking down two German planes, a Heinkel 111 and a Junkers 88 reconnaissance craft, by ramming. The latter yielded valuable documents, a communique reported.

Thursday's aerial operations resulted in destruction or damaging on 20 German tanks, 75 motor trucks, 60 supply carts, 18 field and anti-aircraft guns and five mortars and 40 railway cars. A munitions dump was blown up.

British Attack Axis Positions

CAIRO, June 6.—(AP)—British tanks and infantry attacked Axis positions west of Knightsbridge Thursday night, opening a drive sustained successfully throughout yesterday by armored forces. British general headquarters announced today.

Knightsbridge, a desert trail crossing about 15 miles southwest of Tobruk, is roughly 20 miles east of where British and Axis forces have been marring in a seeming preliminary to resumption of the 12-day-old Libyan battle in which Field Marshal Erwin Rommel is said to have lost 340 tanks.

The initial phase of the attack was successful," the war bulletin said, "and fighting by armored forces followed throughout the day (yesterday).

"Our air forces co-operated with our land forces. Details are not yet available."

Important Changes British Army High Command Expected

Forthcoming promotions are to be based on the understanding of modern warfare methods as shown in recent manoeuvres, the correspondent said.

Beverages and Extracts

Man does not live by bread alone . . . he needs drink as well.

We admit that's a slight departure from the meaning of the proverb. But it is still true. Beverages are a mighty important item in your daily diet. And whether you favor a cheering cup of tea or coffee, or the friendly zip of a carbonated drink, you will feel better for the experience.

But you knew that already, didn't you?

What you might not have known though is that some of the most popular brands in beverages are Alberta Trade-Marked Goods. Yes, there's tea and coffee and a wide choice of truly delicious "soda pops" all packed and produced in the Province.

You've noticed the pick-up that follows a brief pause for your favorite beverage. You feel fresher. Your thirst is quenched. You actually go back to the job with new energy.

This applies to most beverages. But there's more. Ask for the products of the Alberta Manufacturers listed below . . . and you will have the extra satisfaction in knowing they are the products of Alberta workmen.

Besides, there are none better.

Then there are extracts. Here we shall include concentrated fruit juice, cordials, flavorings and vinegars. These too can be described as top flight in quality.

The manufacturers of Alberta can well be proud of their products. They do their part.

To demand Alberta Trade-Marked Goods is yours.

Graduands To Attend Banquet On Saturday

By MARGARET PENDLETON

Pre-examination activities will be concluded on Saturday evening when the graduands of Victoria High School gather in the Corona for the graduation dinner and dance.

Commencing at 7:00 o'clock the banquet will be followed by toasts and songs. Special features of the program will be a solo by Rosemary Fulks, and the presentation of awards to Art Hiller and Nellie McLean, for outstanding academic and extra-curricular activities throughout their high-school years.

Toasts will include: "To the Grid Class," by C. O. Hicks, principle, and answered by Jimmy Brown, class president. "To the Students' Union," by Miss E. Tookey, and responded to by Ken Torrance, Union President. "To the Staff," by Nellie MacLean, and replied to by D. L. Shortliffe, and "To the Boys in the armed forces," proposed by Art Hiller and answered by C. S. M. Charles Rainsforth, R.C.A.F.

Dancing will follow the banquet with Cecil Cameron's orchestra supplying the music. As no corsages will be worn this year, Red Cross ribbons may be purchased at the door, with the proceeds going to help the Red Cross drive.

Scona Annual Is Released This Week

By JANE GOULD

After months of strenuous labor on the part of the editorial staff the 1942 issue of the Tricolor, Strathcona High Schools annual publication was distributed this week. This is the fourth issue of the year book, and fully "experience teaches" for this year's publication is something of which these young editors may be justly proud.

A simple but touching tribute to the S.H.S. boys who have fallen in the present conflict is the dedication "to the memory of those students of Strathcona High School who have made the supreme sacrifice that all future students may pursue their educational careers in a democratic way. In times such as we are now passing through it is essential that none of us forget that brave souls are protecting our interests every hour of the day." And this dedication gives just this needed reminder to the average carefree high school student.

Edgar Johannson and Margaret Sheldon as co-editors did a splendid piece of work and assisted by Jack Cooke and his staff who were responsible for the advertising. Without this section the Year Book could not be published. Mr. A. J. Heywood was the Staff Advisor.

At the request of the Student Council a special short on the part of every student was made this week, to purchase a record number of war-saving stamps. Through out the year Scona's sale of stamps has been fairly consistent and this last effort proved a satisfactory finish.

"Y" Boys' Camp Opens At Elk Island Park, July 2

With the coming of summer and the closing of schools, the minds of boys turn to the great outdoors. Camp Kenwaythin in Elk Island Park affords such opportunities to all teen age boys in the city of Edmonton and district. Kenwaythin, in one of Canada's famous national parks, is ideally situated to give a boy a camping adventure never before experienced of days filled with activity, canoe trips, overnight hikes, personal fires and pageant, crafts and skills taught at camp, wholesome food, tent programs, and many other activities that go to make each day at camp a different adventure.

Special care is given to the health and safety of all campers at all times. Each tent is supervised by a well chosen counsellor who helps each camper to enjoy fully his stay at camp. Water sports are carefully supervised by well trained lifeguards and at no time are campers allowed away from camp without adequate supervision. Meals are planned by a dietitian to ensure the healthful development of the campers and prepared by an experienced cook. W. Armour Bull, boys' work secretary of the Edmonton Y.M.C.A., will be camp director and Allan Porter will be program director.

Any boy of good character, 10 to 18 years of age inclusive, in good health and resident in Northern Alberta may go to Camp Kenwaythin. A boy does not have to be a "Y" member to attend this camp. Information and camp folders may be obtained by applying to the Y.M.C.A. or by phoning 2167. The camp will be divided into three periods: July 2 to July 16, July 16 to 23, and July 23 to August 6. Camp accommodation is limited and registration forms should be sent in as soon as possible.

Any worthwhile activity must have real objectives and that in itself makes Kenwaythin a excellent Camp is more than a holiday, for it offers an opportunity to develop resourcefulness, initiative and a manly Christian character under conditions that call for the best in boy life. Leadership training, acquiring skill of the out-of-doors, natural religious worship, wholesome fun and the joy of achievement are the major objectives.

Group Adopts Crest

At a recent joint meeting of the old and new executive of the Interdenominational Young People's Board, it was decided to adopt a crest for the group, with the motto "Christus Victor." The group also decided to change its name to the Interdenominational Young People's Union.

Canada's Best In Pictures, by C. W. Jeffreys: This collection of fifty drawings by Canada's foremost historical painter, makes a fascinating pictorial survey of Canadian history. The descriptive text is by the author.

Firecracker, The Wild Bronco, by Will and C. W. Gerard: Firecracker was a wild bronco that had been captured and taken to a rodeo. There he was offered as a prize to anyone who could ride him. This is a very entertaining story of a bucking bronco from the horse's point of view.

Flicka, Ricka, Dicka and The Three Kittens, by M-j. Lindman: When Uncle Jon and Aunt Hedda came for a visit they asked Flicka, Ricka, and Dicka to name after Mitti, the big black-and-white cat. All went well until the following morning when Mitti disappeared.

Into The Wind, by Gertrude E. Mallette: Bob Dunning's experience three months as a probationer, before she can win the right to wear the real student nurse. A book for girls who are interested in careers.

Little Toot, by Hardie Gramatky: Little Toot was a tugboat. His father, Big Tooter, was the fastest tugboat tug on the river, and Grandfather Toot, tug, old and tall, you would think that with such a family, Little Toot would have his work cut out for him, but not at all. Little Toot just wanted to play.

Lone Bull's Mistake, by James Willard Schultz: Because he had broken the tribe's hunting laws, Lone Bull was publically punished. A proud man, he could not forgive the insult, and he left his own people to wander among savage tribes. A story of the wanderings and adventures of Lone Bull and his family from the time he leaves, until something happens to bring him back to his tribe.

Peter Chrpchmouse, by Margot Austin: Peter Churchmouse was a very hungry mouse who found that they began chewing holes in hymn books. He was so weak, very literally, that Parson Pease-Porridge bought a cat, named Gabriel, to frighten Peter. However, Parson Pease-Porridge's plans went awry, and Peter and Gabriel became good friends.

White Fang, by Jack London: White Fang was a courageous, animal hating and hard part wolf, who had been so abused by man, by means of infinite patience, was able to transform White Fang from a dangerous animal to an intelligent friend.

The Wolf King, by Joseph Wharton Lippincott: Deep in the darkness of the Rocky Mountains the Wolf King led a savage pack of wolves. His hair-breadth escapes, and his magnificent courage provide thrills and excitement for the young reader.

Mrs. Stelk of the Edmonton Girls' Work Board gave a short talk on the C.G.I.T. of today.

Mrs. Stelk was also the speaker at the Knox Mother and Daughter Banquet held last week. The evening's program centered around the theme "Marching to Victory." With president Dorothy Smith as chairman and toastmistress, the banquet brought to a close a successful year.

Old And New Are Blended In Morocco

French Morocco, larger in area than France and with a population twice that of New York city, is a land of contrasts.

Here the old world blends or conflicts with the new, here an armored car stands next to the complacent camel in the market place, here the tongues of Frenchmen, Spaniards, Berbers, Arabs and Jews make a confusing babel.

Such a place is Sefru, an inland town depicted on the stamp issued in 1939.

The world's current politics and intrigue have been felt in the French colony where the Tricolor of France flies next to the flag of the Mohammedan Sultan.

Governing the colony and tribesmen are the men and army (the French Foreign Legion, composed largely of Germans) loyal to Vichy. Casting covetous eyes at the North African land are the Germans who see in it a base from which to launch attacks on Gibraltar or British possessions in Africa.

Church Service Is Attended At Robertson

Scouts, Guides, Cubs and Brownies attended an impressive service in Robertson United church on Sunday evening last. The boys and girls took part in a church parade before attending the service and hearing an address by Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson.

Junior St John's Ambulance tests have been passed recently by the following Guides: Mavis Hobkirk, June McCutcheon, Sylvia Oriner, Careene Woodland, Mary Davis, Robin Munson, Gwen McGregor, Doris Thompson, Greta Marlatt, Margaret Marlatt, Beth Lewis, Mary Warren, Joan Taylor, Lois Miller, Lois McIntyre, Bernice Thyne, Virginia Pidgeon, Betty Higgins and Kathleen Buchanan.

The silver cup was won by the 1st Holy Trinity team consisting of Mavis Hobkirk, June McCutcheon, Sylvia Oriner, Careene Woodland and Mary Davis.

McDougall Plans Typing Contest

By LEO ORNEST

The senior girls' softball team at McDougall Commercial high won one and lost one game to the girls' team Scona. At the game played at Scona recently the "black and gold" Hollingsworth coached club came out with a 15-12 win. This only made revenge for the Southsiders much sweeter when they handed the Commercialites a 15-14 setback in their own back yard. The game was played Wednesday.

Next week will see the start of a knockout typewriting competition for the students of Commercial. To qualify a student must type at a net speed of 40 words a minute for ten minutes.

The winner of the contest will receive a handsome cup. Rivalry is beginning to run high amongst the students with everyone getting the competitive spirit.

As the school year enters the home stretch the grade 12's are busily preparing themselves for the final exams which start on June 22. For many it will mean the end of their school life and evidence of their seriousness to get through may be noted in the classrooms of graduating students.

The "Chronicle," the school paper will make its final appearance on the school grounds early next week. This will mark the fourteenth and last edition.

Introducing...

By KAY W. BIGLAND

Bill Wood, 17, an English guest-child who has been in Edmonton since September 1940. He lived in London, England, where he attended Senr. Sisters Public, Page Green Intermediate, and Tottingham Junior Technical Schools. He is now in grade 10 at Victoria High School, is interested in all of the school functions, and is popular with students and teachers alike.

Bill's favorite sport is rugby, and he likes ice-skating and skiing. In England he proved himself an adept hurdler, and while at Tottingham Technical, he held the school championship in the 50 and 440 yard dashes and his favorite swing band is Count Basie.

Bill says that he likes Canada very much, but misses Canadian schools more pleasant than those at home, as he finds "the teachers more friendly, the holidays longer, and the spare periods during the day convenient."

He now resides with Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner at Deer Lodge and Lake Louise last year, where he worked as a bus boy, and is going there again as soon as he has finished his examinations this month.

Bill intends to join the Canadian Navy but after the war he also hopes to study for a B.Sc. in Chemistry at the University of Alberta.

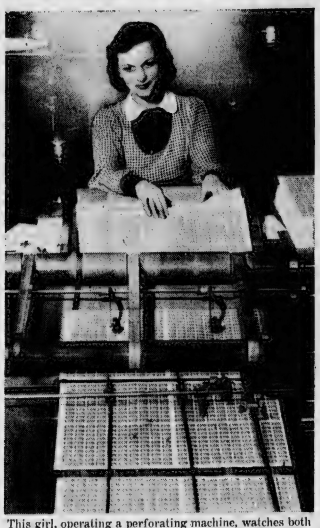
Trinidad puts its destitute families on little plots of ground and teaches them to grow their next meals, instead of putting them on relief.

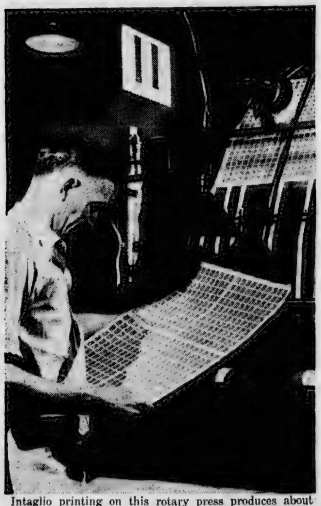
Postmaster General Announces Complete Change in Postage for Duration
New Issue of Canadian Stamps Dramatizes War Effort on Every Front

First step in producing a new stamp is modelling. The artist is preparing design for the 6-cent airmail stamp for which he used four photos made at an R.C.A.F. station for Department of Public Information. Border and lettering are hand done.



This girl, operating a perforating machine, watches both sides of operation by using a mirror, guarding against a pile-up as sheets round corner for horizontal perforation.

The skilled engraver is cutting the original postage stamp die on soft steel. It is then approved by Hon. W. P. Mulock, Postmaster General, before being hardened. The impression is transferred to a soft steel cylinder, then to printing plate.



Intaglio printing on this rotary press produces about 1,000 sheets an hour. Printer is checking distribution of ink. "Electric eye" on top counts number of sheets.

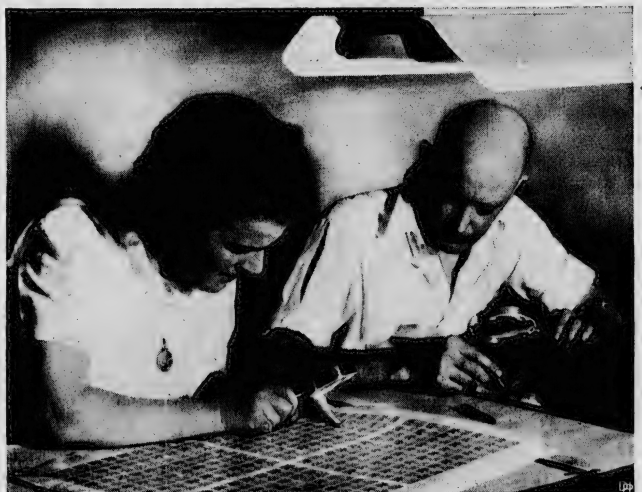
Combining four photographs, this 6-cent airmail stamp records work of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada. Scene is typical of R.C.A.F. stations.

The dark green, 13-cent denomination is a composite, based on photos, showing the Ram tank used by Canada's Army. Tank was named after the Rocky Mountain ram.

An examiner is inspecting a sheet of stamps to insure against flaws caused by plates damaged on press. Work is checked before and after every operation in process.

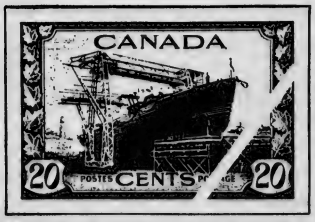
The farm scene in the sepia 8-cent stamp (left) is a tribute to the war effort of the farmer who operates on a small scale. Portraits of the King in uniforms of the three services appear on the one-cent (centre) two, three and five-cent stamps. Canada's war contribution in shipping is pictured in the 4-cent stamp (right).

The new airmail special delivery stamp dramatizes the speeding up of wartime production by swift transfer of documents, plans, orders. Airmail is up 50 per cent.



The woman is checking proof sheet for flaws while the man marks the soft steel plate for corrections. After each impression has been approved the plate is case-hardened and bent for rotary press. They work under a strong fluorescent light, with magnifying glass. Each plate has from 200 to 400 impressions of stamp on it.

An excellent example of fine detail in stamp-making, the 50-cent denomination shows a 25-pounder field gun against the background of a Canadian munitions plant.



Emphasizing the contribution of smaller shipyards in building Royal Canadian Navy and merchant vessels, the 20-cent stamp shows a corvette ready to be launched.

Destroyers of the Tribal Class, as portrayed on the $1 blue stamp, are being built in Canada and Britain for Canada's Navy. They will be named after Indian tribes.

Caribbean Crisis

By Eaton K. Goldthwaite

Four visitors arrive at a Dutch West Indian island to complicate the life of Bill Talcott, who is running six years' exile as branch manager for an American chemical firm. They are Halsey, Bill's successor; an auditor, who immediately accuses Bill of a large shortage in his accounts; MacDowell, a detective brought to take Bill back to the States if any irregularity were found, and June Paterson, beautiful cousin of Bill's former room-mate. Awakened by shouts on her first night at the island, June goes to the dock to find a renegade skipper trying to land two smuggled refugees on the island from his schooner. When MacDowell tries to interfere, one of the skipper's men fells him with a black-jack.

CHAPTER VIII

JUNE PATERSON'S hand was raised to her mouth as if in attempt to recapture the outcry that had revealed her presence. The silly bag was at her feet and thus she stood, a lovely, frightened girl outlined in the glow of a searchlight. Captain Jackson's scowl was swiftly erased; a startling white grin made a gash in his dark face and his eyes reflected inner fires.

"Caramba!" he said softly. "An I thought t'ees one I 'ave was beautiful! Senorita, you 'ave t'ees suitcase. You with passage, no? You want get away from here, no?" He leaped down from the cabin roof, strode forward rapidly. "Juan! Take the Senorita's bag! Pronto, fool. Theenk we 'ave all night?"

The girl stood transfixed, staring in terror at the prone figure of MacDowell. A moment before he had been a staunch, trustworthy figure, armed with a pistol, belligerent, aggressive. Now he was deathly still, a rivulet of blood coursing down his neck.

It was so swift. She had sought escape from a place to which she had come with such great dreams. Yet no matter how great her disappointment in Bill Talcott, every fibre of her being told her that here was no escape; that once on that dirty gray schooner even life itself might be forfeit.

"No!" she cried violently. "No, I don't want to go away—"

The attacker whose blackjack had so quickly subdued MacDowell was attempting to wrest the bag from her fingers when Leonard Halsey galvanized to life. With a low growl he rushed, lowering his shoulder so that the man called Juan was sent reeling backward into the oncoming Captain Jackson. The action was swift and the impact solid, and the swarthy, swaggering skipper fell backward, twisting in desperate attempt to save himself. The shotgun had him off balance; its butt struck the pier with a resounding thwack and the roar of its discharge blasted heavenward.

Perilously close, that fury of shot and fire had been. Then event followed event in confusing swiftness. Halsey scooped up MacDowell's pistol. The huge native Tomas moved with the speed of light, capturing Juan in his great hands. Sebastien, clutching his injured arm, kicked viciously and accurately at a fallen man who was attempting to rise.

Only Bill Talcott did not move. Whether bewildered or frightened, he stood stockstill, lifting not a finger to assist Halsey. Talcott's face was devoid of expression, his eyes blank, his arms laxly at his side; whatever fight he had had was gone from him and he stayed a disinterested, dull observer.

"Back, all of you!" Halsey shouted, leveling the pistol. "Talcott, pull yourself together! You, Jackson, get these men aboard and get out of here. I warn you, I'll fire at the slightest disobedience!"

There was one coming over the side with a knife in his teeth. Unhesitatingly Halsey fired. The knifeman yelled in pain, scrambled hastily back to the deck. Jackson, facing Halsey with murder in his eyes, felt the hot breath of the bullet in his face and jerked violently backward.

As for the fellow in black Tomas' hands; a single thin dry scream had come from his lips. Only once it sounded and then he was quite limp. As if he were a bag of nitrate, Tomas tossed him aboard with a mighty thrust; moved to the next, picked him up and slung him to the ship's deck and thus with the last until of the schooner's crew only Jackson remained on the pier.

The swagger was gone from the dark skipper. His face was livid with fear, his eyes riveted on the gun in Halsey's hand. "Don't shoot me," he begged. "Don't shoot—"

Talcott was coming over. Head down, legs spread, anger supplanting the blankness in his eyes, "Halsey," Talcott said in a cold, unnatural voice, "it wasn't necessary to shoot that man. I'm still in charge here, and while I'm boss there'll be no gun play on Abas. Put that pistol away."

Halsey's mouth gaped in astonishment. "Have you lost your mind?" he gasped.

Talcott shrugged. "There's been too much noise already. I'm surprised the natives aren't on our ears by this time. You know how much chance we'd stand."

"But your foreman, Sebastien—"

"Sebastien was knifed," Talcott said calmly. "Knives make no noise. It was Jackson's idea to scare us by firing that first shot. He doesn't appreciate, or care, what we're up against on this island. But you should. So put the gun away."

Hardness settled on Halsey's face. "Of all the fools," he grunted. Swinging, he jabbed the pistol in Jackson's side. "I'll see that the authorities hear of this, Mr. Jackson. I'm the new manager here and you won't find me as easy to get along with as Talcott seems to have been. Now, what about these passengers you have?"

In answer, the heads of a man and a woman appeared over the side. The woman, June Paterson saw in that swift moment, was dark with the throbbing beauty of foreign lands. Her skin was clear ivory and her eyes were great dark pools of fear and pleading. Hesitantly she stepped to the pier.

The man who followed her was a most remarkable creature. He possessed a tremendous quantity of hair that must have been dyed, and his eyes were hidden behind thick-lensed glasses that gave his round face the appearance of an orange hiding behind automobile headlights. He was shaking violently and his clothing was much too large, and that was all June Paterson could see, for then Tomas' broad back hid him from view.

A word of protest was on Talcott's lips but Halsey ignored him. "I understand you have papers?" Halsey asked briskly.

The woman nodded abjectly. "The Captain, he has kept them," she said in a tremulous voice slurred with just a trace of accent.

Halsey glared at the schooner's master, and hurriedly Jackson searched; found a stained, dirty envelope in his hip pocket, passed it over. "Open it up and read the contents," Halsey ordered June Paterson.

Dawn was flooding the sky when, in the light of a pier lamp, June Paterson opened the envelope. Uppermost was a passport issued in the name of Martha Swenson and the photograph it bore was an excellent likeness of the woman. The other was for Professor Albert Constantine, followed by a list of degrees; and its photo too seemed authentic enough to identify the strange little man.

"These seem to be in order," she announced.

Halsey nodded. "Good. We'll hear their stories later. Do you have luggage?"

In answer two suitcases came hurtling over side to crash on the pier. Having asked and received the answer that these were all, Halsey prodded the deflated skipper aboard his vessel.

Not a word was spoken as the schooner's auxiliary moved the dirty gray hull away into the cobalt sea. On the pier, MacDowell groaned suddenly and sat up. Halsey leaned down and expertly examined the detective's wound. June Paterson watched, marvelling at Halsey's calm efficiency; watched, too, with open contempt as Talcott stood ineffectually by.

Talcott seemed to have shrunk in stature; already Sebastien and black Tomas were regarding Halsey with the faithful eyes of dogs. Dully she wondered if what had been intimated about Talcott might not after all be true.

What To Do

If you are a dog lover, a cat fancier—or just like to keep pets—be careful of inflicting them on your guests.

You all know people who have an over-energetic dog who bounds to the door to greet you and, in his exuberance frightens you for the first half hour of your visit. Or, the people who say, "you must see the new kitten." And you must whether you care about the kitten or not. Of course, your hose may be torn, or your hands scratched by pussy, but you are required to go through the ordeal just to be polite.

Many people are nervous and unhappy when small animals are around. An animal's actions are unpredictable, and a sudden jump or leap is apt to send your guest into a case of "jitters."

Free Freight On Feed Shipments To Be Continued

OTTAWA, June 6.—(CP)—Agriculture Minister Gardiner told the House of Commons yesterday the policy of free freight on western feed moved to eastern Canada is being continued for "an indefinite period." Under the policy, feed grains are moved to eastern Canada and British Columbia free of charge. The policy was instituted last year to facilitate livestock production in the eastern provinces and British Columbia.

Jewish Appeal To Be Launched Here Wednesday

The annual Palestine appeal, designed by Jewish people across Canada to raise funds in aid of the development of the Jewish Community in Palestine, will get under way in Edmonton at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Talmud Torah hall.

Rabbi Oscar Z. Fasman of Ottawa will be the guest speaker which has been arranged by the Jewish people of Edmonton with a view of setting in motion the local campaign of which John D Dower is chairman

The funds to be raised will be used to aid the Jewish Community in Palestine to expand its agricultural and industrial structure at a steadily accelerating tempo in an attempt to provide needed materials for the British armies in the Near and Middle East.

CONFIDENT OF RESULTS

Mr. Dower is confident that the cause is one worthy enough to evoke the customary generous response on the part of the Edmonton Jewish Community despite the unusually heavy calls on the private purse of the citizens this year.

To set the campaign in motion locally the campaign committee, under Mr. Dower, has arranged for the visit to Edmonton next Wednesday of one of Canada's most outstanding Jewish leaders in the person of Rabbi O Z Fasman of Ottawa.

NOTED SCHOLAR

Rabbi Fasman is a graduate in arts from the University of Chicago with honors in history. He was ordained rabbi by the Hebrew Theological College of Chicago in 1929, and after occupying the pulpit in Tulsa, Oklahoma, from 1930 to 1940, was elected to the present post as rabbi of the United Synagogues of Ottawa.

Since 1940 he has been on the national executive of the Mizrachi Zionist Organization of Canada and is now for the second year vice-chairman of the United Palestine Appeal in Ottawa.

Air Officer Sees Need Of More Recruits commanding No. 3 R.C.A.F. recruiting centre, stated Saturday.

The airplane may bring the devastation of total war to the shores of Canada at any moment, Canada's aerial defences must be manned and on the alert day and night.

NEED URGENT

"Never has the need for trained pilots, observers, air navigators, air bombers, and wireless operator-air gunners been so great. The air-war offensive against the Axis powers in Europe is now in full swing, with Canadians playing a stellar role in the unprecedented furious attacks at the heart of the Nazi stronghold More and more aircrewmen are needed so that the attacks may become more and more devastating and continue without pause.

"Each bombing raid against enemy strongholds saves the lives of soldiers who will later be called upon to make the invasion of Europe. So the great and vital task of training more and more airmen for the continued aerial offensive and also to defend our own Canadian coasts against hostile attack must continue at an accelerated rate.

NO LET-UP

"There must not be the slightest let-up now that we are carrying the war to the enemy."

A couple of weeks ago Canada's minister of national defence, Col J. L. Ralston, C.M.G., D.S.O., stressed the fact that R.C.A.F. home establishments in vital defensive areas are being rapidly expanded. That means that more trained airmen will be required to meet the growing threat of attack on the west coasts.

Canadian youths, who have proved themselves to be without peers in this new war of the skies, will not fail Canada in the hour of greatest need, but the need of rapid action now is the cry of the hour

Noted Dance Band Arrives In The City

The Arena has been loaned for the occasion with the kind permission of Lieut.-Col. W. G. Weaver, Officer Commanding No. 3 Manning Depot, and a dance floor has been laid for the occasion.

Edmontonian Wins Calgary Promotion

Promotion of Capt. Sydney Wood, assistant judge-advocate general at headquarters, M.D. No. 13, to the rank of major was announced Saturday by Brig. E. M. W. Harvey, V.C., M.C., District Officer Commanding, M.D. No. 13.

Capt. Wood, who formerly resided in Edmonton and is a graduate of the University of Alberta with the degree of bachelor of laws, served during the last war with the 54th Bn. C.E.F. in France.

Appeal Speaker

Rabbi O. Z. Fasman of Ottawa, who will arrive in Edmonton next Wednesday to address the Jewish people of Edmonton on the forthcoming campaign in support of the United Palestine Appeal. He will speak at the Talmud Torah hall at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday.

paid American workers receive a 25 per cent bonus for coming to Canada, it is reported.

Although we have yet to hear reports of unrest or threats to strike from Canadians working on the highway, George Black, the veteran Yukon M.P., became so aroused he demanded in parliament last week that the government "see that there allen contractors obey our Canadian laws".

We don't pretend to know the ins and outs of the thing, but just offhand we'd say that Mr Black's language was a trifle "harsh." If American contractors choose to deal "generously" with their employees we can't for the life of us see just how the Yukon Territory stands to lose.

And the word "allen" hardly seems appropriate for citizens of the great republic to the south of us at a time when the common enemy is hammering at our gates.

And Mr. Black would also seem to be illiterally in a very poor strategic position. The great Yukon territory which he has the honor to represent in parliament would be in a bad way indeed if forces guarding Alaska at this critical time were to be cut off from the supply centres of this continent.

The controversy seems all the more peculiar when the same report reported that all costs of the highway are to be paid by the United States government

The fellows that really might have a squawk are the soldiers working on the project. Their rates of pay have been settled for the duration and we have not heard about them receiving any bonus for coming to work in this "foreign" land of Canada.

* * *

But latest reports are to the effect that all differences likely to arise over the different rates of pay have been smoothed out.

So all's well again along America's "Burma Road."

Public Views Shop Products School Pupils

Products of the general shop courses being given to Grade 9 students of McCauley Technical school were exhibited Friday afternoon at the Edmonton Technical school. Items shown included wood-work, metal work, leather craft, and pottery.

The general shop courses which serve as a means of correlating social studies, science and mathematics in their application to daily life, were commenced last September. Since there are no manual training shops at some of the schools, students of McCauley, McKay Avenue, Parkdale, Spruce Ave, Riverdale and Eastwood schools, take the two and a half hour courses weekly at the Technical school under supervision of the teacher, A. P. Tingley.

VARIED ARTICLES

Rather than serving only as a course for making projects, the studies teach the children the opportunity for using the different types of materials, and provide them with a knowledge of the parts the materials have played in the development of civilization and their importance in the industrial and comercial world.

Copper and pewter articles, wood-turned bowls and lamp-shades, key cases, bedroom slippers, end tables, and many other articles, skilfully produced, were exhibited.

Saturday's road report: All district roads in northern Alberta are good.

Safety Drive Check-Up Set Start June 13

At the request of garage and service station operators, the deadline for motor vehicle owners to get their "safety stickers", has been postponed for one week. Chief Constable A. G. Shute announced Saturday.

The original date was set at Saturday but in compliance with the wishes of the garage and service station operators, the date has now been extended to Saturday, June 13.

The co-operation of drivers and garage operators has been so complete that it has been impossible to keep up with the demands, Chief Shute stated.

The garage operators in country points have also been co-operating to such an extent that no fewer than 35 garages in towns of Northern Alberta, have asked for the stickers from the accounting department of the city police.

MANY STICKERS

In the first 10 days of the check-up period 3,330 stickers have been issued, and many more motorists have made arrangements to have their vehicles checked during the next week.

Last year there were 2,758 stickers issued during the whole campaign.

Brakes, lights, windshield wipers and horns come in for special attention as well as any other car equipment. After the check-up the motorist is given a sticker which he is asked to display prominently.

Commencing next Saturday, June 13, the city traffic squad will be instructed to commence checking up on vehicles failing to display stickers, and any inadequacy to the safety equipment may lead to prosecution, Chief Shute announced.

Accepts Dare But Has To Pay Fine

Using a sling shot on the window of a passing auto cost Walter Belcourt, St. Albert, $3.45 and costs, or an option of seven days in jail, when he appeared before Police Magistrate A. L. Millar, K.C., Friday afternoon.

Belcourt answered a dare offered by a friend and sent a stone through the windshield of a passing car. The incident occurred near St. Albert.

Arthur Tomle was fined $10 and costs for unlawfully carrying passengers in a truck [illegible] Browne was asked to pay a [illegible] of $5 and costs when he was found guilty of assault. A charge of causing wilful damage was withdrawn.

Joseph Pollman, Vermilion, was found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of his 15-year-old daughter and sentenced to two years in Prince Albert penitentiary.

A previous conviction of two years was quashed by the Attorney-General's department and the new charge was laid by the R.C.M.P. Follman pleaded guilty to the charge.

Dental Students Enlist In Body

The entire fourth and fifth year final classes of dental students of the University of Alberta have enlisted as private soldiers in the Canadian Army (Active), it was announced Saturday.

They will be granted leave of absence to complete their studies, and will receive privates' pay and subsistence allowance until graduation.

Upon graduation, they will qualify for commissions as dental officers in the Canadian Dental Corps. This has been made possible by special arrangement with the Canadian government. There is an acute shortage of qualified dental men for the services due to the rapid expansion of the navy, army and air force.

The University of Alberta are accelerating the course for these students, whereby two classes will graduate by August, 1943.

The announcement was made Saturday by Maj. A. M. Palmer, D.D.O., Officer Commanding No. 33 Company, C.D.C. (R.C.A.).

Elks' Membership Reveals Big Gain

The net membership increase of Alberta Elk Lodges during the last 11 months has been approximately 482 according to information released Saturday by A. N. McKinley, secretary of the Alberta Elks' Association.

With enlistments in the armed forces so numerous, any increase at this time indicates a healthy condition, it is said.
